BRITAIN WILL AID IF U. S. AND JAPAN FIGHT

Churchill Promises Immediate Declaration of War, Says Ships Ready.

AXIS CONVOYS SUNK

Nazis Enfold Leningrad In Wide Offensive, Batter at Sevastopol.

(By Associated Press)

With Russia battling for life against new German threats, Britain in a great aerial offensive to relieve pressure on her ally, and the whole Orient shadowed by threats of wider war, Prime Minister Churchill declared today:

"If the United States should become involved in war with Japan," Churchill said, "a British declaration would follow within an hour."

The prime minister asserted that Britain had "broken the morale of the Italian navy" and "we now feel ourselves strong enough to provide powerful navy forces of heavy ships with the necessary ancilliary vessels for service if need be in the Indian and Pacific oceans . . ."

This hint of a growing initiative by Britain came amid the strained Japanese-United States relations which a special Japanese envoy flying to Washington, seeks to ease.

Almost as Churchill addressed his cheering audience at the induction of London's new lord mayor, the United States ambassador to Britain, John G. Winant, in a speech at Plymouth, declared that the first premise in fighting "an enemy who is ruthlessly determined on world conquest" is to "fight him on ground you choose rather than on ground he chooses."

Churchill explained that he was making his statement of British intentions in the Far East because "we do not know whether the efforts of the United States to preserve peace in the Pacific will be successful."

Leningrad, which Adolf Hitler boasted he could storm and capture whenever he wished to, was being enfolded today by two wide-swinging encirclement offensives of the Germans—a bit of grand strategy dictated apparently by the chance that Finland might step out of the war before Hitler is ready.

The Hitler command announced capture of the important traffic junction of Tikhvin, about 100 miles southeast of Leningrad, by

Crestline Trio Escapes Death In Train Wreck

CRESTLINE — Three residents of this city escaped death or serious injury when a crack Pennsylvania railroad train piled up near Dunkirk early today only because they had given up their regular seats to ride in the baggage car.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hammond, Knapp apartments, North Seltzer street, and Mrs. Walter Mooney, Clink boulevard, received minor cuts and bruises when the train crashed, killing 11 passengers and injuring 50 others.

Returning from a visit with friends in Fort Wayne, the trio found the regular coaches overcrowded. A conductor told them there were seats in the baggage car.

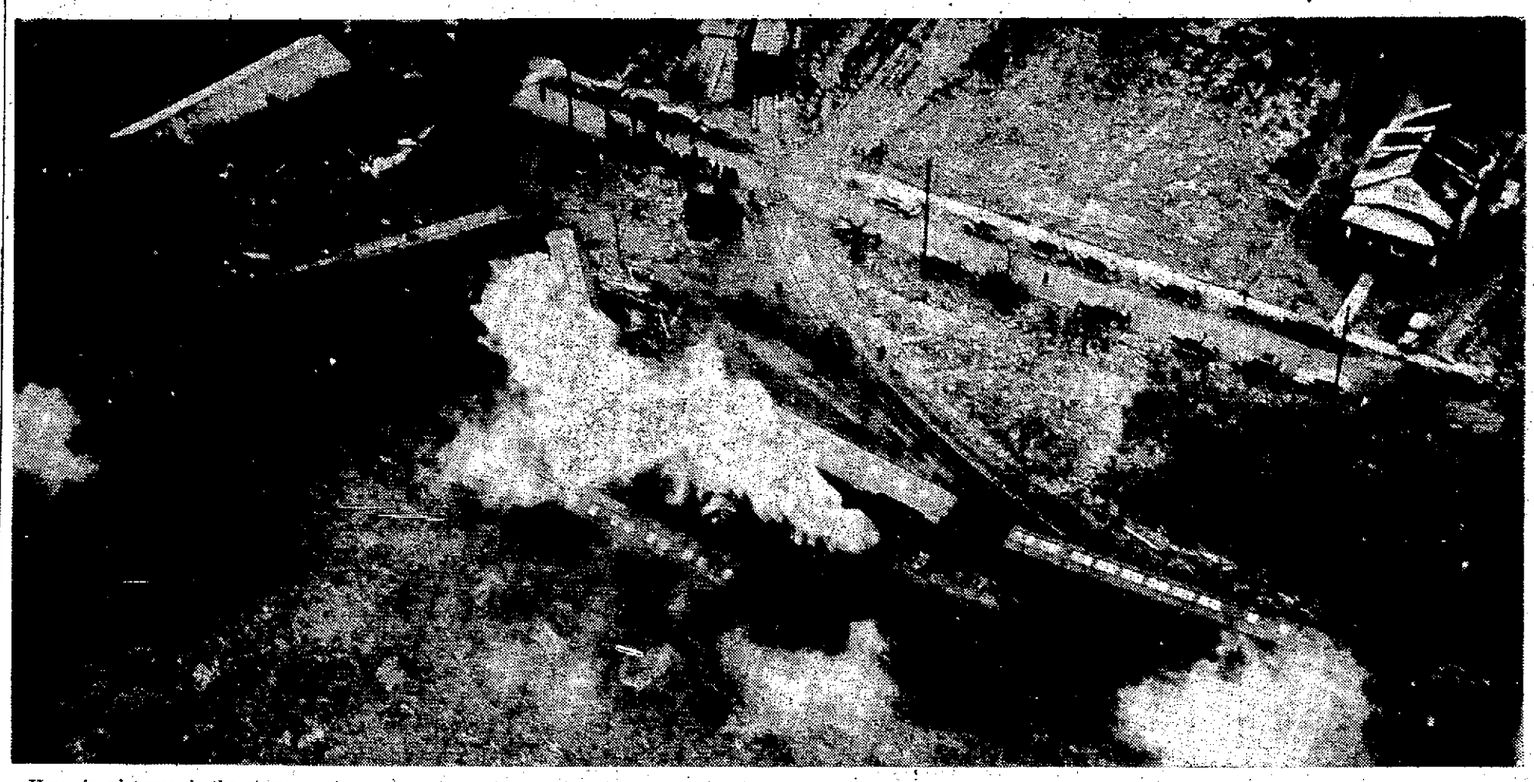
They went to the baggage car which was immediately back of the locomotive tender and was the only one to escape serious damage. When the engine jumped the track, the baggage car was thrown forward while the other seven cars in the train piled up in the wreck with the locomotive.

The Hammonds and Mrs. Mooney were thrown forward in the crash. Suffering from shock, they were returned from Dunkirk to Crestline early today by Mr. Mooney who drove to the scene of the wreck early today.

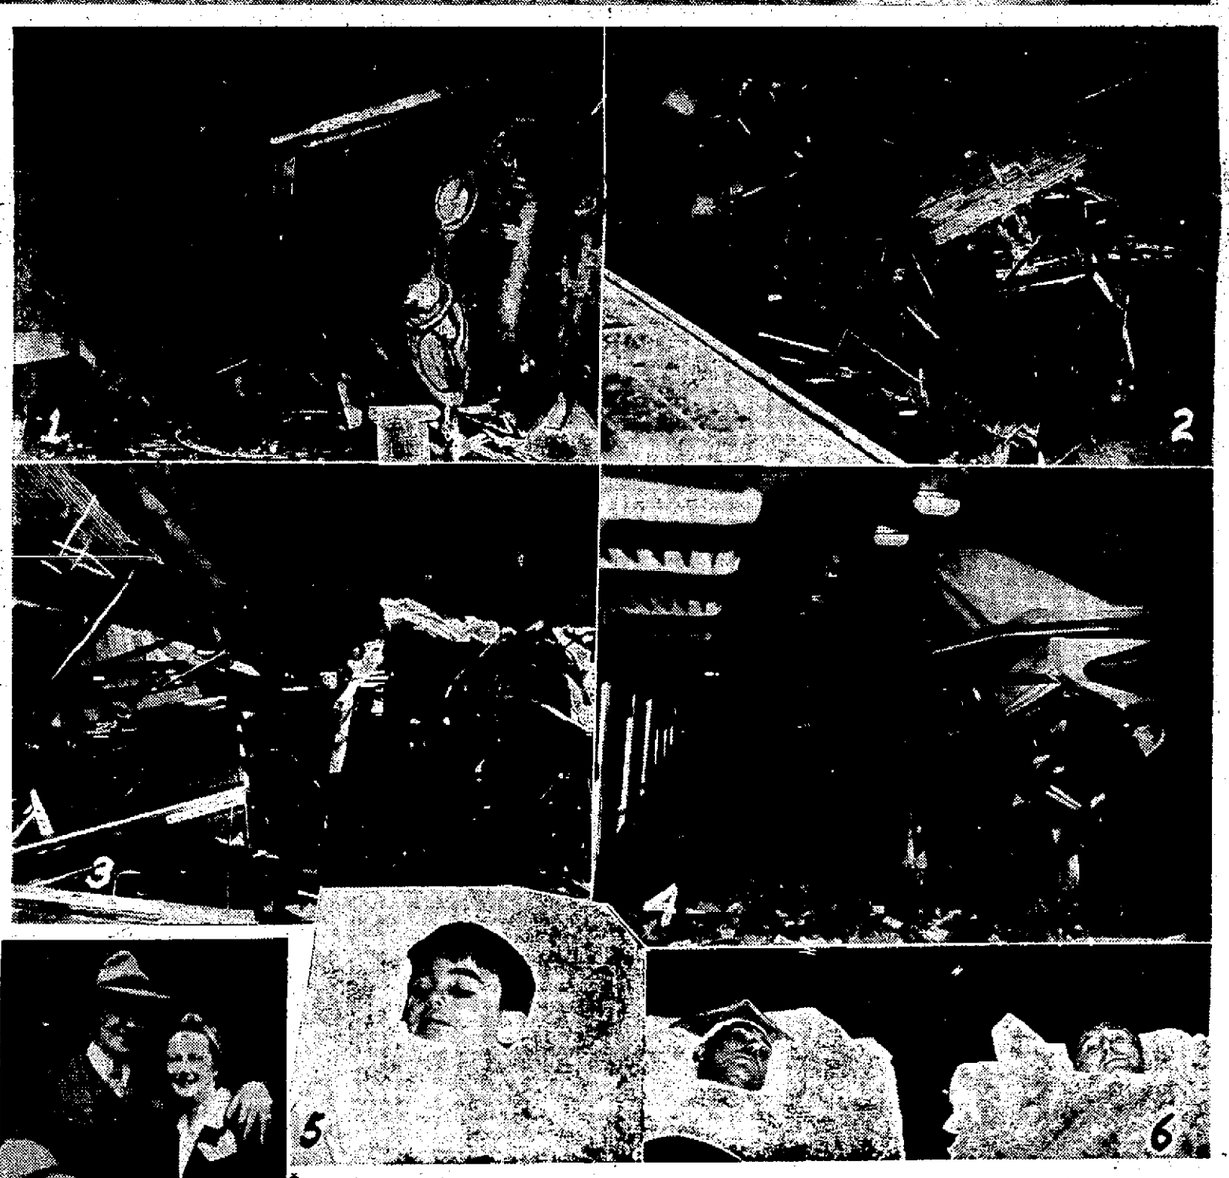
CRITICIZE BRITISH

MARION — (AP) — A resolution adopted by the administrative council of the Ohio Veterans of Foreign Wars criticized Great Britain for storing materials needed by the United States and other non-Axis nations and for "inactivity" in the present war.

Here Are Pictures of Wreck That Took 11 Lives



Here, in pictures, is the story of the tragic wreck of the crack Chicago-New York flyer, "The Pennsylvanian," at Dunkirk, 53 miles west of Mansfield last night. At top, an aerial shot of the wreck scene made for The News-Journal by the Harrington Air Service. Five coaches can be seen lying on their side, while near the shed at upper left can be seen the overturned locomotive. Second row, left, (No. 1) a close-up of the engine lying on its side. No. 2 is another view of the engine, strewn with debris of the freight shed and signal tower. No. 3, wreckage of a coach and freight shed. No. 4, how the interior of one of the coaches looked. Note that there are no seats on the left side. No. 5, an unidentified—and uninjured—boy who slept quietly despite the excitement of the wreck. No. 6, Paul Bergstrom, left, and Rev. August Aden, Rankin, Ill., pastor, who were among the injured.



Mr. and Mrs. Leo Avington, recently married Mansfielders, who were among those who met death in the wreck.

POLICE HUNT MISSING GIRL

Father Fears Foul Play In Disappearance of Daughter, 20.

Mansfield police were making a search today for a pretty 20-year-old girl missing since early Saturday when she disappeared on the way to work at a Mansfield knitting mill.

Martin Wynn, Mansfield, R. D. 5, told police that his daughter, Nina, had not reported for work at the North American Knitting mill on Spring street Saturday morning nor had been seen since her brother, James, left her off at the Richland county courthouse earlier that day.

The father said James Wynn and Thelma, the missing girl's sister, both worked at the mill with her but that they started work an hour earlier and customarily left their sister downtown to report at the mill later.

The father told police he feared "foul play." He said he did not believe she had left home voluntarily since she had no extra clothing with her.

The Wynn girl is about five feet, ten inches in height, weighs 130 pounds and has gray eyes and brown hair. When she left home, she was wearing a blue plaid skirt, a red sweater, brown oxfords and a tan military topcoat.

Police were checking relatives of the Wynn family to find if she had decided to visit them over the week-end. If no information is obtained today, they plan to ask help from the state highway patrol radio system to aid in their search.

STILL COUNTING

Cincinnati Voters Learn Who's Elected Six Days Late.

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Today—six days after balloting—Cincinnatians learned the winners of their city council contest.

A field of 27 candidates had narrowed to 11—four of them elected, and six others competing for five remaining council seats as the low-ranking candidate was being counted out under the proportional representation plan.

POISONED BY FOOD

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Reps. Day (R) Ill., and O'Connor (D) Mont., their secretaries and a capitol policeman today were recovering from mild cases of food poisoning. Health department employes are testing samples of food from a restaurant near the capitol where the five had lunch Saturday.

Tells How She Missed Train, Took Flyer That Was Wrecked

If her train from the west coast had arrived in Chicago on time yesterday, Mrs. W. P. Sheets of 355 Marion avenue, would be safe at home today instead of in a hospital as the result of a train wreck near Dunkirk last night.

Swathed in bandages, Mrs. Sheets, from her cot in McKitterick hospital at Kenton, told News-Journal reporters, among the first on the crash scene, that the train she was riding arrived in the Windy city six hours late.

Instead of catching the Trail Blazer as she had planned, she was forced to take the "Pennsylvanian" on its ill-fated journey in her hurry to get to Mansfield.

Stricken with pain, her face battered and bruised from the tumbling around she received in the smashup, Mrs. Sheets related that she had spent the past four weeks in California.

She was to meet her husband, a retired merchant, at 11:05 p. m. at Crestline. The train does not make a stop at Mansfield.

Sheets, reached at home by telephone, rushed to his wife's bedside.

Hospital attendants said Mrs. Sheets suffered a skull injury but expressed belief that she would recover sufficiently to return to Mansfield within the next few days.

REPORT DUE

Recommendation on Captive Mine Dispute Expected Shortly.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Defense mediation board officials indicated today that the board's final recommendations on the issue of a union shop for 53,000 workers in captive coal mines of seven states might be issued tomorrow if not late today.

A board official indicated, however, that the 11 voting members had not yet arrived at their decision. They spent much of last week in hearing the arguments of mine operators and UMW spokesmen and were reported to have spent the week-end drafting a statement of facts.

N-J STAFF AT WRECK SCENE

Editors, Photographer Speed To Dunkirk to Bring Story To Readers.

Within 10 minutes after word was flashed that the "Pennsylvanian," crack Chicago-New York train had been wrecked at Dunkirk last night, the News-Journal had set into motion all available news coverage facilities to bring to its readers today a graphic word and picture story of one of the most tragic rail accidents in this vicinity in recent years.

Robert E. Rogers, state editor, received first word of the tragedy from the Mansfield sub-station of the state highway patrol which picked up a state broadcast ordering dozens of highway patrolmen to the scene.

He immediately called R. D. Lindsay, managing editor, and Frank Walters, photographer, and within another 10 minutes the three men were en route by automobile to the scene.

Flyer Piles Up West of City, 50 Are Injured

Recently Married Mansfield Couple Are Among Crash Victims; Steel Coaches Twisted To Bits By Impact Of Smash; Inquiries Open.

BULLETIN

KENTON—Death toll in the wreck of the crack "Pennsylvanian" here last night was boosted to 12 at noon today with the death of Irwin Bower, 60, Laureldton, N. J.

By R. E. ROGERS and R. D. LINDSAY

Piling up with a thunderous roar, a crack Pennsylvania train smashed to bits last night at Dunkirk, 53 miles west of Mansfield, killing 11 persons, among them two Mansfielders.

Fifty others were injured, including a Mansfield woman.

Also among the 11 dead was a Mt. Gilead man.

Those from Mansfield who met their deaths in one of the most horrible of recent railway disasters were Mr. and Mrs. Leo Avington, of 110 Blymyer avenue. He was 37, and local superintendent of the Western and Southern Life Insurance company. She was 26.

Also dead was M. L. Ray, 44, of Mt. Gilead.

Among the injured was Mrs. William P. Sheets, of 355 Marion avenue, who was on her way home from California. Mrs. Sheets was in McKittrick hospital in Kenton, with critical injuries.

Work crews clambered over a mass of twisted wreckage today seeking additional victims among the 113 passengers aboard the fast Chicago-New York train, "The Pennsylvanian."

H. E. Newcomet, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad today said that the wreck was caused, according to a preliminary investigation, when the speeding passenger train struck a cylinder head which was blown out of a passing freight locomotive.

Newcomet, in a statement read:

"The locomotive on the freight train FW-33, bound west from Crestline, O., to Ft. Wayne, Ind., with 48 cars, blew out its left front cylinder head just west of the station at Dunkirk.

"The cylinder head fell on the adjoining east-bound track immediately thereafter and before there was time to flag it, "The Pennsylvanian," moving at high speed on the east bound track, struck the damaged cylinder head, derailing and turning over the engine and wrecking the eight cars in the passenger train."

The all-steel train, hurtling eastward at a 70-mile-an-hour clip jumped the tracks almost directly in front of the small village depot, at 10:22 p. m., an hour before it was scheduled to pass through Mansfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Avington were married last June at Akron and came to Mansfield to make their home immediately after.

The couple had gone to Chicago Saturday to visit Avington's sister, Mrs. H. E. Griffin. Mrs. Avington was an expectant mother, it was learned from friends of the couple.

Kay was superintendent of construction on a rural electrification expansion project in Morrow county. Employed by the Kelso-Wagner company of Dayton, he was returning to Mt. Gilead from Milwaukee, his home.

His body was identified several hours after the crash from a note found in his pocket. It was a copy of a telegram he had sent to friends in Mt. Gilead telling them to meet him in Crestline at 11:05, when the train was due there.

Nine of the wreck victims had been identified early today, and authorities were seeking to learn the name of a woman whose body was taken from the wreckage.

She was decapitated, and the only clues upon which officers could proceed were her black shoes. Within one were the initials "NE," in the other the date "April 7, 1941."

Her hair was brown, with a few streaks of gray; she appeared middle aged and weighed about 150-155 pounds. She was well groomed and wore a plain knitted navy blue dress. Police theorized she was a professional woman.

The body was in the Preston funeral home.

The locomotive flopped over on its side and slithered for about 200 feet tearing up track bed and piling into a signal tower, demolishing it. The first coach bounced free of the wreckage. The second

2 MANSFIELDERS DIE IN CRASH OF FAST TRAIN

Eleven Meet Death, 50 Hurt As Flyer Piles Up 53 Miles West of City.

coach was cut cleanly in two down its length and piled up ahead of the locomotive. Several cars were telescoped into one another and others were left in crazy zig-zag position along the right of way. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

Passengers were hurled helter-skelter out of their seats and berths and into near-freezing temperatures. Bodies of the dead were horribly mangled.

Two railroad employes were in the signal tower when the train crashed into the building. They leaped to safety. The building, with its expensive signal apparatus was reduced to tinder. The frame structure collapsed over the locomotive and caught fire from the firebox. Within minutes it was blazing high.

The injured were first taken into the town's little station. Ambulances were summoned from the nearby towns of Findlay, Lima, Bluffton, Ada, Kenton and Upper Sandusky. The dead were removed to mortuaries and the injured to hospitals.

Volunteer workers aided railroad workers in extricating bodies and aiding injured trapped in the cars. A light snow was falling and flares were set around the wreckage to aid workers.

Engineer R. S. Schuler, of Fort Wayne, Ind., one of the 48 persons to survive the wreck said from his bed in a Kenton hospital "something went wrong" just after he passed a westbound freight.

Roy Schwartzkopf, operator of the control tower into which the locomotive smashed, told this story:

"I noticed the headlight of the train swerving back and forth and swaying from side to side. It started to weave about 400 or 500 feet from our tower. As it came nearer, it turned sidewise and started to tear up the track, as if its wheels were loose or even off."

Within the space of seconds, the tower had been reduced to a shambles, the ground around it had been plowed into mounds and valleys, sturdy steel coaches had been reduced to twisted scraps of metal and heavy steel rails looked like nothing more than strands of spaghetti.

Though Dunkirk is a small town, word of the mishap spread with lightning-like rapidity, and within minutes, throngs of sightseers flocked along the tracks.

Meanwhile, doctors, nurses and ambulance assistants rushed to the scene and began the grim task of digging the bodies of the dead and injured from the debris of the wreck.

It was an unbelievable sight—long steel coaches and Pullman cars twisted, turned and ripped. Earth piled high where heavy steel wheels had plowed their way after leaving the tracks. Shining ribbons of steel torn and snarled into grotesque shapes.

Wreck trains arrived quickly on the scene and flood lights played on the upturned cars, lending an eerie atmosphere to a scene of desolation and death.

A club car stood at a tipsy angle, chairs and tables leaning crazily against ceiling lights.

Guy Davis, 39, Arlington Heights, Ill., said he was playing cards in the lounge car, where there still were about 30 persons.

"There was a grinding of brakes and then chairs and furniture and people were thrown about the car," he said. "I jammed the cards in my pocket for some reason and ran for a corridor. Luckily, I got out."

Lynn Mahan, Chicago, public relations officer of the American Locomotive company, said he was thrown from his bed in a Pullman compartment. Uninjured, he dressed and climbed out of the car.

"The engineer was hitting it up at near top speed, it seemed," he said. "I had gone to bed. I noticed the car began to sway; the whole train was trembling. I knew we were off the rails. It went about a hundred feet before it stopped."

I. B. Lydick, Dunkirk, who lived a block from the scene, was in his living room playing with a jigsaw puzzle, when he saw flying sparks. He heard no noise.

"It looked like a flue burning out," he said. "People began calling for help. I ran over to help get them out. We had to tear the seats out to get to some of them."

Lydick helped remove a woman trapped in a washroom. She said she had been en route to visit her ailing father at Harrisburg, Pa., and had received word at the last stop that he had died.

Paul Bergstrom, 36, of Worcester, Mass., a salesman for the Amity Leather company, said he felt the engine jump the track.

"It hit something which made a terrible crash," Bergstrom added. "The next thing I knew I could hear horrible screaming and moaning. That's the last I remember until I was taken in McKitrick hospital (at Kenton)." He suffered severe scalp lacerations and body bruises.

R. W. Roney of Lake Forest, Ill., riding in the club car, remembered:

"There was a terrible jolt and our car slid sideways. I could feel the car jolting on the rails and ties. We were bounced around the car."

A two-ply investigation of the accident got underway early today. F. R. Gerard, general superintendent of the northwestern division of the Pennsylvania, said his office would start an inquiry in Fort Wayne, Wednesday, and the state utilities commission assigned two inspectors to the task of seeking the exact cause of the crash.

As soon as word of the wreck reached the Pennsylvania railroad terminal at Crestline, a locomotive and one coach was rushed to Dunkirk to pick up uninjured survivors. They were brought to Crestline at 3:15 a. m. and were taken on to their destinations.

A "terrifying shriek" was the passengers' only warning of the train wreck at nearby Dunkirk, Bert Gamage of Rutherford, N. J., asserted.

Gamage, riding in the coach sheared almost in two by the crash, suffered only a foot injury as a seat was torn from the floor.

"There was a terrifying shriek and I could feel the car buckle on the rails," Gamage said.

"The lights went out and the car filled with steam.

"Children screamed for their mothers and mothers screamed for their children.

"Arms and legs were strewn about all over the car."

Gamage, secretary to the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, praised the Pullman porters for their rescue work.

"With blood streaming from gashes in their faces and hands, they worked like mad to remove the injured from the twisted wreckage," he related.

How Coach Of Wrecked Train Came To Rest

men of the major press associations were on the scene, The News-Journal was the only out-of-town newspaper, with the exception of the Lima News, which is located only 25 miles from Dunkirk, to cover the accident.

As Walters made pictures of the wreckage, Rogers and Lindsay got eye witness accounts of the tragedy and then went on to hospitals and mortuaries to interview passengers aboard the ill-fated train.

Mrs. W. P. Sheets, 355 Marion avenue, one of those hurt, was interviewed at McKittrick hospital at Kenton, shortly after she arrived.

That done, arrangements were made by telephone with J. R. Harrington of the Harrington Air Service, to fly to the wreck scene and shoot a picture from the air.

Thus, News-Journal readers get, before the readers of any other newspaper to reach Mansfield, a complete story—with pictures—of one of the most serious railway accidents in recent years.

Wanders From Her Home, Gets Free Cab, Cruiser Ride

Susan Brubaker, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Brubaker, 455 South Main street, became bored this morning while her mother was washing her baby sister—Carol Ann, and decided to take a walk.

She was noticed by Jay Prosser, cab driver, while she was walking on Prospect street, about two blocks from her home. Prosser stopped his cab and sought to question her.

Unable to make anything out of her replies, Prosser brought her to police headquarters. Detectives Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp were no more successful in translating her baby talk than Prosser.

Finally they decided to take Susan riding in a police cruiser in the neighborhood where Prosser found her. Susan prattled away happily, no longer bored. As they passed the Brubaker home on South Main street, Susan cried, "There's mommy."

Mrs. Brubaker had just discovered Susan's absence and had called the police station to ask if they had found her daughter.

Unaware of the slight furore she had created, Susan went into the house with her mother, hungry for breakfast.

a force moving across the Leningrad - Moscow communications zone.

The other arm of the offensive, from the northeast over Karelian approaches won by the Finns, was disclosed in advices reaching London. The Germans were not talking much about this phase of the new campaign, but it came as a sequel to a suggestion from the United States that Finland make a separate peace with Russia.

A DNB dispatch reaching London today said that the Finnish government's reply was expected within a few days.

The capture of Tikhvin, on the night of Nov. 8, the Germans said, was the result of a surprise attack and gave the attackers "numerous prisoners and large booty." The captives were part of 20,000 reported taken on the northern front since Oct. 16, raising the total for the war so far to 3,632,000, according to the Nazi statistics.

More than 1,000 miles south of Leningrad, German troops and their Rumanian comrades volleyed and thundered against the Russian defenses of Sevastopol, big Red fleet base at the tip of the Crimean peninsula — the setting which produced th storied charge of the light brigade in the second Crimean war.

The Germans said they were blasting an ever-widening breach between the Russians defending Sevastopol and those clinging to the narrow approaches to Kerch, to the northeast, sought by the Germans as a jump-off point for a thrust into the Caucasus.

The Moscow front appeared to be static but a London source said that there was "heavy fighting and stubborn resistance" by the Russians in both the Leningrad and Moscow sectors. This source added that the Germans had failed thus far to pierce the outer defenses of Sevastopol.

That port city was reported under aerial and land bombardment on a 24-hour schedule. Kerch likewise was being pounded from the air.

The regular mid-day communique of the Russians, typically cryptic, said that fighting continued through the night all along the front but no specific mention was made of the Crimea where fierce combat had been acknowledged.

The Moscow radio, saying German reserves were moving up again before the Soviet capital, forecast a renewal of the central front drive soon and added: "our troops are ready."

The RAF struck at Germany and German-occupied zones overnight, chiefly at Hamburg, for the third night in a row. A London authority said more than 100 planes took part and two were lost. It was part of a week-end aerial offensive aimed at German positions from occupied Norway to the Mediterranean.

London authorities said the British navy had wiped out two Axis Mediterranean convoys of 10 supply ships and at least one destroyer without suffering a scratch.

Thousands of fresh soldiers drawn from garrisons in Norway and other German-occupied lands were declared in London dispatches to have been massed for the attack upon Leningrad's defenses both east and west of Lake Ladoga.

Death came to 2,500 of them, the Moscow radio said, in a Soviet victory at the village of Kestenga.

German airmen said big fires were started in Leningrad, and 53 Russian planes were shot down yesterday in aerial attacks.

Russian sources in London expressed belief the Germans hoped to close breaks in the siege lines, cutting the defenders off from rail outlets to Moscow and water routes of Lake Ladoga and the Gulf of Finland, before their Helsinki allies reply to Washington's peace suggestion.

It was only Saturday night that Adolf Hitler, in a speech at Munich, said the Germans were on the defensive before Leningrad but that the city's troops would starve before they broke out.

Germans told of the capture of Yalta, Crimean port 30 miles southeast of the fortified naval base of Sevastopol, and were reported to be threatening Sevastopol itself.

Since Thursday, 17 Soviet transports have been sunk and 30 others damaged, by bombs the Germans said, and 20 Russian warships and 34 freighters have been sent to the bottom of the Black sea since November 1.

Barring of Japanese commercial establishments from Panama brought sharp comment by Tokyo newspapers, which declared Washington must bear the responsibility if Japanese-American relations were strained anew by the Panama government's action.

Hochi asserted the United States had engineered the recent coup which deposed Arnulfi Arias as president of Panama as part of a plan to eliminate all Japanese from the Canal Zone area.

Britain Celebrates Sinking of 2 Convoys

LONDON —(INS)— All Britain today celebrated another major sea triumph—the complete extermination of a double Axis convoy by four British warships almost within sight of Italy's southern coast.

In a lightning attack, the admiralty announced, the British war vessels sent 10 supply ships and at least one escorting Italian destroyer to the bottom of the Mediterranean.

The communique added a second Italian destroyer was seriously damaged and a third was seen in tow. The British vessels and their personnel came through unscathed from what Prime Minister Winston Churchill called a "most important and timely action."

Terming the attack a "brilliant and determined exploit," the admiralty said the British squadron —the 5,270 ton cruisers Penelope and Aurora and the 1,920-ton destroyers Lance and Lively—dashed to the battle despite the fact they were considerably outgained.

They opened fire on the Axis vessels a few miles south of Taranto, Italy, although the enemy supply ships were protected by two 10,000-ton Italian cruisers of the Trento class and a large number of Fascist destroyers.

Nine of the 10 Axis vessels were sunk swiftly and the tenth—a 10,000-ton tanker—was left to burn for at least 10 hours until it was a "total loss." Thus, British naval quarters said, the attack squadron scored the biggest victory over an Axis convoy thus far in the entire war.

The British vessels escaped without a trace of damage, the admiralty stated, although they were "ineffectively" attacked by Italian torpedo planes as they sailed from the scene of their triumph.

Italians Admit Convoy Losses

ROME—(INS)—The Italian high command conceded in a war bulletin today that a British naval division sank two Italian destroyers and seven merchant ships in an attack on a convoy in the Mediterranean.

The announcement said Italian torpedo planes scored hits on a British cruiser and destroyer.

(Editor's note: The British admiralty communique on the encounter said the British warships sank 10 supply ships and one Italian destroyer, damaging a second destroyer and forcing a third to be taken under tow. This account said the British vessels emerged from the engagement without a scratch.)

RAF Continues New Offensive

LONDON—(U.P.)—The Royal Air force attacked Germany for the third consecutive night of a new offensive last night, sending more than 100 planes into a starlight attack centered upon the big north German ports and naval bases.

Hamburg was the chief target, where powerful forces of long range bombers carried out a concentrated attack upon docks and the naval yards.

Secondary raids were directed against Cuxhaven and Emden, sites of important naval works and industries while smaller forces bombed Dunkirk and Ostend.

An authoritative source said only two planes were missing, a sharp drop from the huge losses suffered in the attack made in bad weather Friday night and Saturday morning.

British Destroyer Reported Sunk

LONDON —(INS)— Sinking of the 1,870-ton British destroyer Cossack was announced by the admiralty today.

(The H. M. S. Cossack, completed in 1938, was one of Britain's tribal class destroyers. As a flotilla leader it carried a complement of 219 officers and men.

(Capable of a speed of 36.5 knots, its armament included eight 4.7-inch guns and four 21-inch torpedo tubes.)

The admiralty announcement said:

"The board of admiralty regrets to announce his majesty's destroyer Cossack, commanded by Capt. R. L. Berthon, D. S. O., has been sunk.

"Next of kin of the casualties have been informed."

CHAPTER XVIII

"He was a greenhorn. New to the country. She took him in hand. Began coaching him. Teaching him everything a man needs to know out here. He even hadn't learned to dance, so she taught him. Naturally he felt—"

"Naturally!" Joy's thinging was ahead of him now.

Ward stopped abruptly. "I've talked too much," he murmured.

But, doggedly, he felt no regret. He was a little hard about it. And he was thinking rapidly now.

He had put in a deliberate piece of propaganda. Truthful propaganda but purposeful even so. In his way—naive as he was so far as women's hearts were concerned—he thought he had sown a seed that might bear fruit for himself, and without being disloyal to a friend either.

He figured that Joy Boone was as fine a person as his sister. His sister had been willing to sacrifice herself in a crisis, so probably Joy would be willing to do likewise. If Joy could feel that her friend, Polly, had some prior claim to Ken—"

"Then the way might be open for me!" Ward told himself. "Maybe Joy just thought she wanted Ken. Maybe I still have a chance!"

He hoped fervently that his wasn't merely wishful thinking. He was baffled now by the odd expression on Joy's face.

That first morning's deer hunt brought no results.

"We saw two bucks and later some does," Mr. McMurray reported at noon. "But all were out of rifle range. You ought to be tuckered out by now, Miss Carlson. We'll eat and rest. High altitude walking gets anybody's wind."

They didn't phrase it so and perhaps didn't even analyze it to themselves, but Polly and Ken in one unit and Joy with Ward as another hadn't been intent enough on deer hunting. These four young folk had personal matters on their minds. Ward sensed that when all came back empty handed.

"Tell you what," he said at lunch. "You all rest up a bit after eating. I'll just trek down to the Dos S ranch and borrow some saddle horses. It's only four miles."

"I'll go with you," Ken volunteered.

"Nope. You stretch out here. You don't have—"

"I can stand it," Ken assured him.

Ward liked him for that, and Polly smiled her approval. As for Joy Boone, she said nothing. Indeed she was abnormally quiet, Polly observed. Polly came to her and tried to talk, but Joy's response was none too cordial. She just gazed at the campfire as if thinking.

"You're more tired than you realize," Polly ruled then. "Take off your shoes and warm your toes good, even if you don't actually take a nap, Joy."

"I'm never tired, thanks. I'm all right."

• • •

Ward and Ken were back with horses in about two hours, but the three older people elected to stay in camp and try their hunting again next day.

"The kids'll find something," Mr. McMurray declared. "You four go on out and get some meat, doggone it. We'll stay here and fix supper for you."

Polly and Joy, Ken and Ward, took rifles then and went off horseback, threading single file through the aspen and maples and fir and pines.

"Keep your eye to windward, across the canyon yonder," Ward instructed them a bit later. "And let's concentrate on seeing."

They hadn't gone a half mile farther before Ward himself, in the lead, reined in his horse and held up a hand in signal. He dismounted and edged back to the others.

"Get down!" he murmured. "You girls! We're screened here but from right yonder you can see a swell buck. You're the company, Joy; you crack down first. Sis can have the next one."

Trembling a bit in excitement, Joy walked forward with Ward, grasping her rifle. Polly and Ken tip-toed behind them. All peered at once. Through an opening in the trees about 200 yards away stood a buck so large that Ward himself gasped, "Whew!" in hunter's admiration.

"Careful aim!" he whispered to Joy.

She lifted her gun, held her breath.

CRACK!

The gun thumped her shoulder hard.

Across the canyon the deer leaped.

"Shoot again! Quick!" Ward urged.

She emptied her repeating rifle then, firing as fast as she could aim at the fleeing game. But still the buck raced on, bounding and snorting unharmed. It was tearing along a steep slope, trying to climb but blocked by a rock wall 'or a ways, moving at an angle away from them.

"Take him, Sis! Before he's gone!" cried Ward.

The buck was not visible, though, for another few seconds. They could hear his crashing through low brush. Polly said nothing. She lifted her rifle, trained it on a point considerable distance ahead of the buck's probable path. Then there was a momentary flash of tan through the leaves again, she pressed her trigger.

Polly shot just once.

The four youths, transfixed there, saw the buck leap upward, somersault and fall in a heap. No more noise of plunging, no more commotion in the brush. Ward hurried back to the horses.

"That's a good 350 or 400 yards, Sis!" He complimented her, proudly.

• • •

They rode over there to find it a 12-point buck in excellent condition. Polly's shot had been a clean one right through the neck so as to crack the spinal column. Instant, painless death.

"G-great day!" murmured Ken Palmer, in admiration. "That was sure 'nough shooting!"

"Lucky," Polly declared.

'Lucky nothing!" Ken faced her beaming. "You've been telling me yourself that rifle luck is a matter of steady nerves, miss! Gosh but you had the slant on that one, Polly! Ow!"

He couldn't say enough. He was a young man beside himself with excitement, almost as if it had been his own first kill. Obviously his pride in Polly was genuine.

Joy said nothing.

If a touch of jealousy assailed her, that was because she was only human here. In a sense, it is true, she had excellent alibi; she was new in the west, a city girl not experienced at hunting. And yet she had been cocksure on the university rifle range. Her target work had been rated excellent. And she had done some duck hunting back east. But hunters take little recognition of alibis, and youth is even less prone to maintain "excuses" in such matter. Joy Boone stood convicted of inefficiency here!

Ken himself addressed her first. "Look, Joy, where you missed was in not leading your game," he presumed to coach her. "I watched where your bullets hit. Polly has told me about it. She says you have to watch the speed of—"

"I see!" Joy said icily.

"Yeah." Ken, wide-eyed with enthusiasm, was insensitive to Joy's mood. "Look here, Polly said to squeeze the trigger like this, too. I think you gave it too much of a jerk. She said it's a common mistake for beginners, and I tried it last week on the desert. It takes a lot more self-control than you realize but Polly showed me just how to save motions so as to—"

He had a great deal more to say. Much more of Polly's expert instruction to pass on, giving her what he would have felt was justified credit.

But Polly was quick to sense the tactlessness of his coaching here! "It's nothing!" she tried to soft-pedal. "What I showed Ken, Joy, was what you already knew, of course. I happened to be exceedingly lucky after you were unlucky with your shots. You'll get the next one."

'It's not luck, I tell you!" Ken almost shouted, like a small boy insisting excitably on his point. "You've just got what it takes! Gee!"

Ward, grinning, had to tone him down. "Here, Ken, take this piece of rope and help me, and stop arguin' the wimmen! We have to gut this critter then get the carcass on a hoss. Lordy, he weighs plenty!"

• • •

Ward sent the other three back to camp with the kill so that there might be fresh venison for supper and so that he might ride on unhampered. Back in his mind, he whispered to Polly, was a hope of making one or two more kills so that they could have enough venison to feed Polly's entire senior class when they got back to school. Polly heartly approved that idea. Ken's horse could pack this first kill in, Ken leading it afoot.

With Ken to "squire" the girls and with Polly a safe guide for them, Ward, waved to them in farewell and rode off alone. An hour or so later there was due excitement in camp when the three older people inspected the game.

Supper was ready by 5:30 p. m. but Ward had not returned.

At 6 Mr. McMurray made those present eat anyway. They were all famished, and there would be plenty to keep warm for Ward.

At 7:30 he hadn't returned, but at 8 they heard his voice through the forest. "E-yea-a-a-a-ho!" he sang out.

Ken shouted back exhultantly, then with Polly and Joy walked out to meet him. When he rode into the glow from Ken's flashlight, Ward was grinning broadly. In his arms he carried a spotted fawn!

"Won't find a thing like this once'n a hundred years!" he declared, to the group now excited anew. "Young fawn this late in season. The mother had been killed by mountain lions, just before I got there. They'd of got this little feller in a few minutes more. He was crouched in the leaves near here, hiding. My horse just happened onto him. He's starved."

Joy was most distressed of all. "Aw-w-w-w!" she ran to it, took it from Ward, cuddled the dainty arm full as if it were a child. It's hair was ever so delicate. It's great eyes were pleading so that Joy quite shed tears of sympathy. Nobody laughed at her. On the contrary, every one was sympathetic.

Ward mixed some condensed milk and water, warmed it over the fire.

"He's too little to drink, so how—how can we—?" He squatted there hold the pan and frowning a little.

"Wait!" ordered Joy.

She ran to one of the cars, hastened back carrying one of her gray kid gloves. With Ward's aid she poured warm milk into the glove, they cut a tiny hole in the end of the middle finger. In a matter of seconds the baby deer was greedily nursing!

"Well I'll be doggoned!" Ward murmured. "I'll just be eternally doggoned! Look, Joy; just look a there!"

"Oh, Ward!" she whispered it.

Ward looked at her a long moment. "They raise easy. Joy, would you—like to have him? For your own?"

The blond eastern girl, holding the wilderness orphan on her lap now, looked up at Ward McMurray and smiled a bit. Her eyes were misty as she nodded.

"He's yours. I wanted you to have him!"

Farmer's Gift to Town More Than Pays for Itself

ATHOL, Mass. —(INS)— Way back in 1876, the town of Athol was in financial straits.

Farmer Lyman Jennings offered the town $9,000 as an outright gift—if they signed a contract.

The contract called for the township to pay Farmer Jennings who was then 58, a life annuity of $540 yearly.

Each of his three children was to receive $120 annually for the rest of their lives and if his wife survived him, she was to get a life annuity of $170 annually.

On Nov. 7 of that year the town voted to accept the gift and the board of selectmen signed the contract.

When Mrs. Addie Stratton, 83, last of the children died recently, the contract was terminated.

Yes, the $9,000 loan cost the township $20,220.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1941.

Increase in the life span does not apply to reckless drivers.

According to Lindbergh, he is the sole originator of his speeches—and it's nice to know they weren't imported.

Those who couldn't save any money when taxes were lower will now find it easier to convince themselves that it is impossible.

Ohio's Experiment In Communism

AN OBSERVER of the operation of communism in Russia recently made the statement before a Mansfield audience, "Communism cannot distribute wealth; communism can only distribute poverty."

Except as an academic ideal, the appeal of communism is mainly to those who seek to rise to a subsistence standard of living, as was the case back in 1817 when persecuted Germans emigrated to America and founded a communist settlement at Zoar, in Tuscarawas county.

Already accustomed to hunger and privation, these industrious and thrifty immigrants set up a communal farm and village for the purpose of self-preservation. They gradually acquired several thousand acres of land and established shops, a mill, brewery, dairy and hotel—all owned in common, with products distributed according to needs of individuals and families.

While this plan served to provide the actual necessities of life—which was an advance step for most of the participants—even this meager prosperity was attributed largely to the ability and shrewdness of one man in position of leadership, and decline started quickly after his death.

Discontent also developed among younger members of the commune as they realized the greater opportunities of the American system and as outside employment made it possible for some of them to rise above the mere subsistence level to which their forebears had aspired.

So Ohio's experiment in Communism fell apart and was finally dissolved by court action, with division of property among the 222 remaining members.

Now the Zoar Foundation, organized in the hope of preserving this disintegrating communal village, is urging its purchase by the state, for administration by the Ohio Archelogical and Historical Society.

If the remnants of Zoar can be made to stand as a monument to the fallacy of communist doctrines such an investment might be well worth while.

Tragedies That are Too Common

SUCH a tragedy as that which occurred in adjoining Crawford county Saturday night gives special timeliness to Elsie Robinson's "Listen World" article which appears on this page today.

"Whose fault is it," is asked in this article, which says: "Every day, in some American town, horror happens . . ."

Mansfield has not been free from such horrible occurrences . . . nor is it now free from the menace created by the very type of persons to which the writer makes reference, who are permitted to be at large, without surveillance, because no way has yet been found to handle such cases until AFTER some atrocious act has been committed.

Quite frequently, and while there would still be time for preventive measures, potential offenders of this kind are recognized as "queer," but little attention is paid to typically moronic or pervert types until after irreparable damage has been done by them.

However much the police may know about such characters, based on observation or verbal complaints of queer behavior and annoying acts committed by persons who lay themselves open to suspicion, nothing much can be done about it in the absence of specific charges of a definite offense, by which time it is often too late to avoid terrible consequences.

Read the Elsie Robinson article—and note her statement: "We cause it . . . we millions of well-meaning but criminally stupid, sentimental people who refuse to take such situations seriously and handle them scientifically."

Far-Reaching Ambition Foreseen

DR. HERMANN RAUSCHNING, once a Nazi leader and president of the Danzig senate, and now in this country, says German leadership is looking forward toward a "third World war." That would come, he explains, after a breathing spell following the present conflict. In that third effort the Nazis hope to complete their world conquest.

It is a discouraging thought, at a time when the whole situation is far from bright. It may help, though, to stiffen resistance against present Nazi activities. All the evidence lately seems to strengthen the view that Hitler and his crew are really determined on world domination and will never cease their efforts until they are crushed by superior forces.

They are supported by blind faith in their leader and his teaching, says Dr. Rauschning. The Russian revolution, he maintains, was more in line with European tradition than were national socialism and fascism. There is a chance, he thinks, of the Russians being rechristianized, but national socialism admits no such possibility.

English Girls Want To Shoot

DR. EDITH SUMMERSKILL, laborite member of the British parliament, insists that women should be admitted to the home guard as something more than cooks, clerks, typists and telephone operators. She believes they can learn to shoot effectively and that their service would prove invaluable in case of invasion.

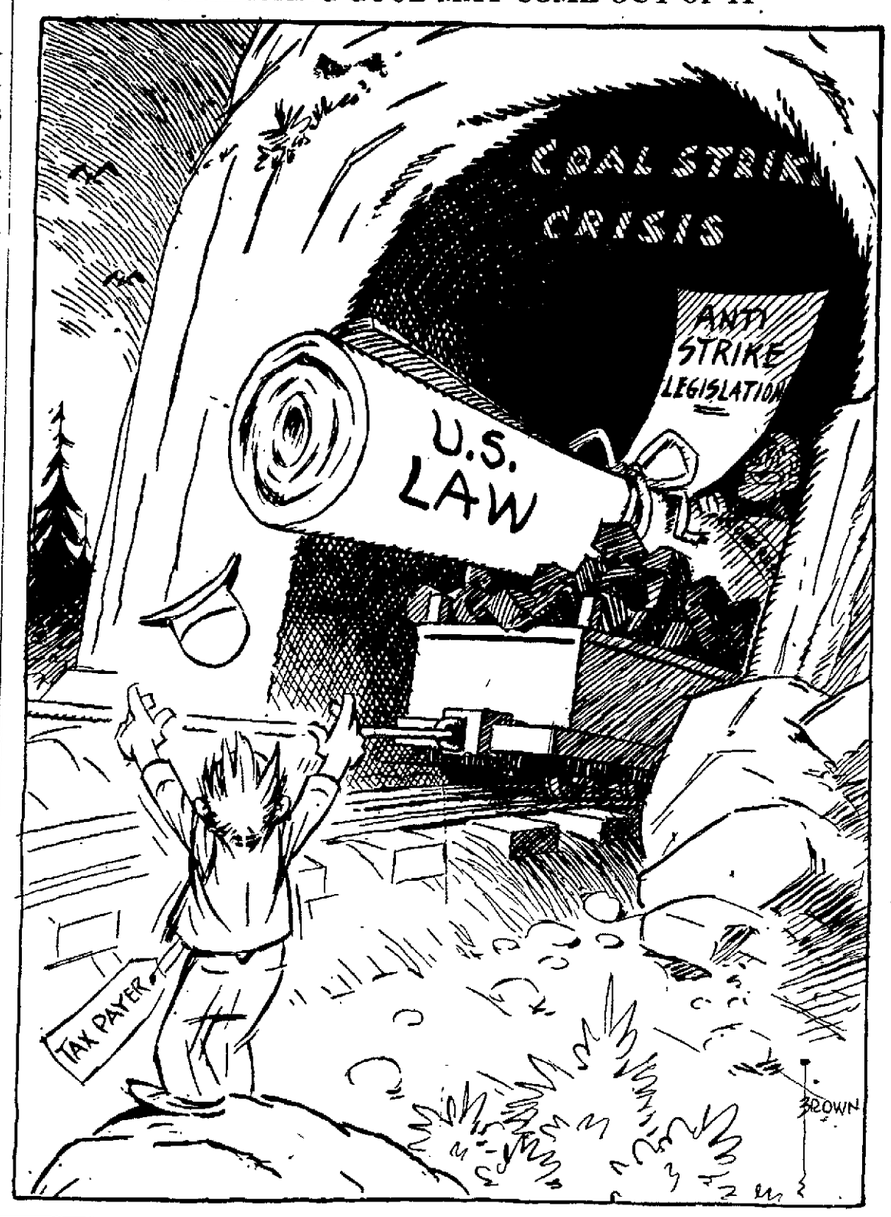
So far the government is deaf to her pleas. It's stupid of them, she holds, proving one of her points at least by scoring seven bullseyes in her first 10 shots at the house of commons rifle range. She wants to put shooting instruction within reach of girls' groups all over the country.

There's another thing the government doesn't understand about women in the British Isles, Miss Summerskill declares.

"In the north of England mock invasion recently they actually asked 1,000 women to pretend to be hysterical," she says scornfully. "I was simply staggered when I heard of it, for the heavy German raids have shown that hysterical women simply do not exist any more."

She seems to be winning her point. Late news from London is that girls are manning the anti-aircraft guns and doing a fine job. They'll probably do more before the war is over.

SOMETHING GOOD MAY COME OUT OF IT



Listen World!

Whose Fault Is It?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

EVERY DAY, in some American town, horror happens. A child is snatched . . . an old woman beaten . . . a lovely girl slain. For a brief interval, everyone shudders, gossips endlessly and avidly over the hideous details. Mayors issue statements. Women's clubs demand investigations. Policemen tear their hair. Then, presently, the story slips from the first page to the third . . . to the fifth . . . and is forgotten.

WHILE SOMEWHERE, IN THE NEXT HOUSE, PERHAPS, A MONSTER CROUCHES . . . CHUCKLES . . . BIDES HIS TIME.

Recently—remember?—such a nightmare came to the peaceful town of Reading, Mass. Merry little Constance Shipp, beloved 15-year-old tomboy, disappeared. Scampering on a brief errand for her mother, she hailed a passing pal, ducked around a corner, vanished. Impossible! It couldn't happen... not in Reading...not to Constance. Yet it had!

Five days later, they found her. She'd been long dying...hours over which it's well not to dwell. Yet all the while, she'd been lying near, in an empty house. To which a boy returned each evening, whistling, to do his regular chores—mow the lawn, tidy the paths and, when the street was finally empty of sound or light to grin through the window.

Raymond Woodward, all Reading knew him too. A slender, dreamy "sissified sorta kid." Yet, despite his angel face, he'd given Reading's oldsters plenty of grief. Always in scrapes. Not the usual kind of boy mischief. Queer, cruel stunts. Hiding behind bushes... jumping out to frighten little girls ...snatching them, beating them, as he grew older.

Even while he was helping the neighbors search for Constance he was out on parole. Another girl had been killed. No sign Raymond did it, but you never could tell. They'd let him go for a while, watch and see.

So they watched. And saw. Raymond went with them. They saw him looking down at her, blankly cracking his knuckles the way nervous kids will. Then a horrible, quiet snicker began to spill out of his eyes and spread over his face. That was enough for the police. They didn't need to watch any more. They went away. Raymond Woodward went with them.

Horrible? Yes. But whose fault is it? Chances are, you'll give the regular answers...blame it on the juke joints, pool halls, trashy movies and cheap magazine thrillers. Don't! These things complicated but they did not cause this tragedy. We cause it ...we millions of well-meaning but criminally stupid, sentimental people who refuse to take such situations seriously and handle them scientifically.

Raymond Woodward—and the thousands like him—are not private problems. They are a public peril and have been so since they were born with a "short circuit" somewhere in their warped brains. Raymond needed help...should have been given it in a proper environment by trained people. He should never have been left to his own devices.

SUCH PEOPLE, WHETHER THEY BE "ANGEL FACED" OR MERE ANIMATED LUMPS OF FLESH, ARE AS DANGEROUS AS RABID WOLVES. AND IT SHOULD BE AS ILLEGAL TO ALLOW THEM TO RUN LOOSE. BUT WE WHO SHOULD LOVE AND SERVE THEM BEST, REFUSE TO ADMIT OUR IGNORANCE OR DISCIPLINE OUR EMOTIONS.

So Raymond Woodward went his vicious, dream-crazed way. And today little Constance Shipp lies dead, in consequence. As thousands of other helpless ones will die, until we dare to be civilized!

Timely Editorial

Justified Suspicion.

Defense measures that leave a large part of the nation's normal business prostrate and that dry up the sources of taxation tend to defeat their own ends. In a country of such enormous resources as ours it hardly seems necessary, under any orderly system of planning, to have such a situation as we are now facing.

The suspicion seems warranted that some of the shortages that are crippling non-defense industries have no more reality than the gasoline shortage along the Atlantic seaboard that Senator Maloney's committee found existing chiefly in the abundant imagination of Secretary Ickes. A similar inquiry might disclose the comforting information that along with cannon there might be more butter than the administrators of priorities have given us to suppose.

The public is willing to do whatever the war situation actually requires, but it is entitled to have assertions and bureaucratic rulings supported by the actual facts. The desirable ends of national unity are not promoted by policies of deception.—Hartford (Conn.) Courant.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Why We Call It "Mall."

Whether it is the Mall in Washington, in New York City's Central park, or in London, the name stems from the Latin malleus a large wooden beetle.

Applied early to a bat which struck a ball through an iron ring or hoop, especially in the old English game pall mall, it was not before "mall" came to be used for the pastime itself.

Thence it was an easy step for its application to the place where the game was played, a public promenade, and a level, shaded walk.

No More Than I Need.

Lord, keep me from the greed that I
See all about me; let Me go in peace and have no wish
Beyond my needs, no fret

That comes from lust for gold pifed high

Let me be satisfied when warm
And fed and housed I bring

My pleas to lay them down each day
Here at your feet, let me
Desire no more than what I can Use in simplicity.

Odlum Working On Plan to Save Small Factories By Priority Grants

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It is an unpublished but tragic fact that various regional offices of the Securities and Exchange Commission today are preparing for an avalanche of bankruptcy cases, expected as a result of the defense program.

Thousands of little business men, whom the New Deal vowed to help, will have to close their doors because of the dearth of raw materials; and the SEC, established to aid in the registration of new business, is now charged with the job of officiating at the funeral.

Companies manufacturing enamel, now considered a luxury; cash registers, now not so essential; bicycles and scores of other commodities, are having increasing difficulty getting steel, copper, brass and other essential metals.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Floyd Odlum, who once fought the SEC in a terrific struggle, has signed a truce and is in charge of a new office to save little business. Odlum was one of the biggest operators on Wall Street, amassed millions. But this is the toughest operation he has ever tackled.

So far he has been stymied by military red tape and the fact that army ordnance men either can't or won't get out of the habit of ordering from the same big companies.

Odlum has received excellent co-operation from Under-Secretary of War Patterson and the army men at the top. It's the men below who give him trouble. Patterson has set aside $400,000,000 of army orders out of the last congressional appropriation for Odlum to allocate to little companies. But getting the majors and colonels down below to make these allocations; and also to find the little companies equipped and ready to fill the orders quickly, is something else again.

* * *

To Get Priorities.

HOWEVER, here is the provisional plan Odlum has evolved. First, he finds that out of the total 184,000 manufacturing plants in the United States, 133,000 or 72 per cent, employ only twenty men or less. These small plants use only five or six per cent of the nation's raw material. Therefore, he figures, these 133,000 small companies should be given priorities and allowed to get their metal. It won't disrupt the defense program to do this, and it would disrupt thousands of little firms to do the opposite.

Next, Odlum figures that the army has on its list 25,000 firms which it has worked with in past years, and had given them "educational" orders even before the emergency. He thinks the army should be able to keep these firms busy, though he has his fingers crossed on this point. Actually, the red tape artists in the war department have not given orders even to 10,000.

At any rate, Odlum calculates that, excluding the little firms which hire only twenty men, there will be about 34,000 companies to be cared for. These are the firms to which he will try to shoot some of the $400,000,000 set aside by Under-Secretary Patterson.

Whether or not he can do it depends very much on the red tape boys who love the easy routine of letting contracts to their old friends in the big companies, even more than they love an afternoon of golf.

Welcome Royal Guests.

SHORTLY before the Duke and Duchess of Windsor made their last visit to Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt was talking to some close friends about the impending visit, and also remarked that Princess Juliana was coming to see the president a second time.

Mrs. Roosevelt's friends asked how she liked receiving so much royalty. In reply the first lady told in detail her husband's views on the subject. She said the president was talking recently to May Craig, correspondent for several New England newspapers, who told him she thought it was bad public relations to have so many kings, queens and princesses being entertained by the head of a democratic nation.

To this the president replied that aside from his delight in entertaining such charming guests, he welcomed them as representatives of truly democratic peoples. And many Americans, he added, sometimes forgot that these nations were of vital importance to the United States.

Holland, for instance, he said, was a little country, but it had islands in the Pacific on which the United States was completely dependent for its tin and rubber. And he explained how Queen Wilhelmina still held sessions with her cabinet in London, and still had a great deal to say about the fate of these islands.

"And just this week," ths president was quoted by his wife as saying, "I wrote to Queen Wilhelmina and told her that her daughter was going to visit us again."

When Mrs. Roosevelt's friends asked her how she liked having the Princess Martha of Norway and her children around so much, she replied: "Oh, we really like them!"

Great Senate Debate.

THE SENATE debate over the revision of the Neutrality Act lasted two weeks. From the sizzling statements that daily poured out over the press wires, particularly from isolationist orators, the country doubtless gained the impression that a terrific battle was in progress.

Outwardly the senate showed no sign of it.

Most of the time during this two weeks the chamber was largely empty and as peaceful as a library. An attendance of eight or ten was a big crowd. On one occasion, Senator Alexander Wiley, Wisconsin isolationist, talked practically to himself.

Only three other senators were present and two of them were not listening to Wiley.

Even when Wheeler, No. 1 congressional isolationist, delivered his six-hour speech, there was never more than 30 present on the floor, and most of them were his partisans.

Except for the desire to orate, the senate could have disposed of the legislation within 24 hours after it was received.

Capital Chaff.

THE GERMAN EMBASSY in Washington has been writing reports which pile up in a closet because they cannot be sent to Berlin. This is because the Nazis' diplomatic mail pouch no longer can come via Russian-held Vladivostok. Nor can it come via the Atlantic where Britannia rules the waves. Therefore the embassy must communicate with Berlin by cable at tremendous expense. And mail just remains in Washington. . . . Leon Henderson is living up to his demand for the drastic curtailment of automobile production by buying a 1936 Buick. It was selected for him by a garage mechanic who is applying for a job with the Chinese on the famed Burma road. . . The Canadian government would like to strengthen its press representation in Washington, since many Canadian officials feel their problems, particularly conscription, are not properly understood here. But Canadian Minister McCarthy is opposed to the plan and once threatened to pack his bags if press representatives sent to Washington were not directly under his control.

WASHINGTON—Capital Talk: In spite of all the lease-lend funds available, whenever one of the participating nations wants to get what it ordered, it buys with its own cash.

Here's how it was explained to me by the purchasing agent for one of the countries that has access to lease-lend millions: "We ordered a thousand light trucks through lease lend. They must have looked around and picked the company that hadn't had a recent defense order and we got that make of truck. It's a make that we don't like. It's a good truck, but it was designed for your magnificent paved highways, not for the rough dirt roads and boulder choked mountain tracks of our country.

"Consequently, when we want to be sure to get some specific make or some particular brand of product, we just step up with our own money. It doesn't apply only to trucks and it doesn't apply only to my country. We have all learned that the only way of being certain to get exactly what we want is order direct."

HUNDREDS of bills are introduced in congress every session that have no more chance of passing or even being seriously considered than the proverbial snowball that rolled into the devil's workshop. Sometimes, the senators or representatives do it to fulfill a campaign pledge; sometimes to placate a large faction of voters; sometimes to satisfy Mr. Moneybags who has contributed so generously to the campaign. Sometimes it is just for the purpose of getting something into the open.

Sen. Gerald P. Nye took time out from his battle for isolationism to introduce one such bill the other day. It would forbid the president's appointing any member of congress to any branch of the judiciary until that member has been out of office for two years. Such a law would have made impossible the recent elevation of former Sen. James F. Byrnes to the United States supreme court, for example; or the appointment of Rep. Marvin Jones as a federal district judge in Texas.

Maybe that's what Senator Nye has in mind—abolition of the system of rewarding congressmen for work well done by setting them up on one of the federal benches.

No matter what the reason, just try to stretch your imagination to the point of visualizing congress' great preponderance of lawyers voting "aye" to a bill that would make it impossible for them to get a cushy job until they had been "at liberty," as out-of-work actors say, for a couple of years.

THAT Dies Committee list of 1,124 government employes who are said to be members of subversive organizations has started wholesale investigations throughout the government with a score of scared department and bureau heads trying to clean out before the list is made public. One person who knows some of the names on the list says he doesn't know about the membership angle but that there's at least one fellow on there who not only is NOT subversive but is a rabid patriot. "If that man is even tinted with subversion," he said, "then Barbara Fritchie was a Hessian spy."

A Farmer's Diary

Our Winter Birds

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AT THIS date many of our birds have gone south. Still there are more remaining here through the winter than is commonly believed. Although rough winds blow and most trees and hedges are bereft of leaves, just yesterday I heard the lively chirp of a robin on the brambled hill. Regardless of many passing flakes of snow, he could still find food in the warmer earth beneath the leaves and grass. Even in November, worms will find the surface after a cold heavy downpour and every self-respecting robin welcomes this strengthening diet before the winter starts.

All during autumn, every morning I have heard a song sparrow on the willow by the pond. When darkness gathers I hear his song again. Perhaps the warmth of the water in the pond, which never freezes at the inlet, makes possible his winter food. For at this very spot tadpoles are active during all the winter months.

Cardinals flit between our cottage and the barn, and perch upon the wild cherry above the spring. The friendly tufted titmouse is never far away. Chickadees are more in evidence since other birds have left. Last winter I saw them ride up and down the currents of a snowstorm, apparently enjoying this winter sport.

The noisy jay is never silent whenever his blue checked coat can be seen. He buries acorns and digs them up for food, if squirrels do not find them first. I never could believe he knew just where the cherished acorn might be found beneath the snow.

Night owls, small barn owls, and the robust brooding hawks forever haunt the fields and fence rows for mice or rabbits.

The lovely mottled quail so modest and so plaintively musical will devour weed seeds over the brushy swamp and when snow and ice make the land a barren waste, a bevy of quail will come up to the barn and eat with the chickens. I count it a great privilege, on a winter night, to feed them.

Even English sparrows, despised, quarrelsome and friendless, devour many hundred tons of weed seeds annually in Ohio. The hairy woodpeckers seize and devour cocoons and larvae hidden deep in crotches of trees. They go about this scavenger hunt, most business-like.

In winter is a good time to make friends of the birds. They can be so easily seen and recognized—and those that stay with us are worthy of some extra consideration.

CANADA FORMS JUNIOR LEAGUE OF AIR CADETS

Youths From 12 To 18 Are Offered Basic Course In Aviation.

(By United Press)

MONTREAL—Canada is training an army of youths for careers in aviation.

Operating under the patronage of the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, and supported financially by the government, the Air Cadet League of Canada is forming units in all parts of the Dominion to train at least 25,000 youths between the ages of 12 to 18 for possible service in the Royal Canadian Air Force or in the field of civil aviation.

The league, patterned after the Air Defense Cadet Corps in Great Britain from which the Royal Air Force draws many of its recruits, will train boys in administration, aero engines, aircraft recognition, airframes, airmanship, armament, drill, first aid, knots and splices, maps and map reading, mathematics, model building, physical training, signals and the theory of flight.

Organization of the units is almost complete in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, and units in the other provinces will be formed soon.

The Canadian youths are responding to the call for recruits in such numbers that organizers of the scheme believe the original estimate of the number who started training with the opening of school in September—25,000—will be doubled or trebled.

The Air Cadet League was formed because of the continued demands for Canadian boys for elementary aviation training. Organizers explained that the reason the cadet scheme had not been started earlier in the war was because the country was engaged in the task of setting up the gigantic Commonwealth air training plan, and it was necessary to avoid any diversion from it.

The keynote of the plan is decentralization. Each air cadet unit will be a distinctly local endeavor.

Royal Canadian Air Force officers have been appointed at air force headquarters and at each of the six R. C. A. F. commands to act as liaison between the service and properly established cadet units. The government will make a grant of $1 for each senior cadet.

The units must have a membership of not fewer than 50 senior cadets. A unit having fewer than 100 will be known as a flight, and a unit having 100 or more will be known as a squadron. A squadron may have any number of flights of not fewer than 50 boys each.

Senior air cadets will be between the ages of 15 and 18, and units may enroll junior cadets from 12 to 15. The air cadets, as such, will not be liable to compulsory service in the air force, but will be able to enlist voluntarily.

Air cadet training will be similar in principle and scope to the elementary training of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The cadets will be encouraged to complete one to two-year basic course, and then to specialize and become proficient in one of the many fields embraced in air force training.

Training has been designed to be offered outside school hours during the school year for two periods a week of from one to two hours each.

New Naval Air Station Expects Big Enrollment

ALAMEDA, Cal.—(INS)—Within two months an enrollment of 1,000 is expected at the new $13,000,000, Alameda Naval Air station on the salt marshes of San Francisco's east shore. Four hundred will be graduated each month, balanced by an induction of the same number.

The station, now more than three-quarters finished, is located on an 1,100 acre tract facing the bay. The pier can accommodate three airplane carriers and the hangers can hold more than 300 planes.

Students have been assigned to Alameda after having shown special mechanical aptitude at the naval training stations at Norfolk, Va., Great Lakes, Mich., and San Diego, Cal. In normal times the instruction crammed into the 16-week period would take about two and one half years.

Lieutenant Commander Norman L. Gallison is in charge of the station. Under him are six officers and 60 instructors.

Battelle Institute Staff Eases Shortages By Offering Substitutions.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—A dozen years of labor and experiment by research scientists at Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus holds national significance in the drive to relieve a growing metal shortage which soon will be felt by consumers in every phase of American life.

Attention was called to work of Battelle's staff of 175 technicians when the Office of Production Management recommended to the War Department operation of an aluminum plant at Tacoma, Wash.

Production of aluminum planned at the proposed plant from alunite—a gray-white mineral never before used in quantity production of the important metal.

It was at Battelle that alunite was studied as a possible aluminum source, and research experts of the institite were first to convert the mineral into metallic aluminum.

Not only in increased supplies of aluminum, however, will the nation benefit from experiments at the 12-year-old institution, whose staff of scientists represents 75 colleges and universities here and abroad and includes many with international reputations in their fields.

Tin, another metal needed for defense, has come under its study. As a result, housewives may find cans of un-tinned steel on their shelves.

The institute has developed a continuous welding process which produces stronger and smoother seams in cans and which will permit the canning industry—which consumes half the nation's yearly tin supply—to use steel, lacquered or coated to prevent corrosion.

Aviators, too, soon may depend on a Battelle development in the substitution of a plentiful metal for a scarce one. Research has resulted in the suggestion that the government use its huge supplies of silver, and even gold, in bearings for aircraft engines. A thin deposit of silver, plus some lead, or or gold on a bearing is a more than satisfactory replacement for bearing metals high in tin content, Battelle men have learned.

The institution which solves the "impossible" problems of American industry makes no "practical" use of its own discoveries. When Battelle scientists make a useful contribution to industry, their knowledge is given to the scientific world at large or to a private industry, for the institute is not concerned with profiting materially from its work.

Battellee was established by the will of Gordon Battelle in memory of his father, Col. John Gordon Battelle, a pioneer in the iron and steel industry. The institute is endowed and spends $1,000,000 yearly in research at its plant.

WICHITA TEEMS WITH AIRCRAFT DEFENSE BOOM

Employment In Four Plants Rises From 1,650 To 12,500.

(By United Press)

WICHITA, Kas. — Wichita, home of four airplane plants, flush with defense money and expecting more, is booming from a staid middle western city into a roaring beehive of industry and finance.

In one year—from July 1, 1940 to July 1, 1941—employment at the Stearman, Beech, Cessna and Culver plane factories jumped the amazing total of 750 per cent, from 1,650 to 12,500. With the defense contracts went increased construction, banking, retail and wholesale trade and transportation.

But Wichita's city officials, planning with slide-rule precision, are aiming at a campaign of controlled growth with as little dislocation to families and original industries as possible.

The new defense production, which will reach a peak of $260,000,000 in war department contracts, is the backlog for a $3,000,000 network of "super highways," a $420,200 doubling and improvement project on the city's completely modern airport, a host of new housing projects and a general boom in commercial plane travel, commodity sales, farm production and bank deposits.

Fast nearing completion is a 400-family government-built housing project for workers at the plants, and FHA-sponsored projects are rising on the outskirts of the town.

In the plants the expansion in production area—already quadrupled in the past year — will double the present area during the next year and reach 3,000,000 square feet of factory floor space.

Largest expansion is that of the Spearman aircraft division of Boeing Airplane company where work on a $14,000,000 addition to house the production line of giant four-motored flying fortresses has been started. Spearman's original plant is working at capacity on trainers for the army, and contracts for bombers is expected to reach $125,000,000. The company is employing 5,400 workmen, compared with 800 a year ago, and has a monthly payroll of $1,000,000.

Beech Aircraft company has more than tripled its floor space and is still expanding. Workers rolls have jumped from 700 to 4,600. The company is building advanced trainers and transports for the army.

Cessna Aircraft company has more than doubled its floor space, is planning a new office building, has increased employment from 150 to 2,250, and holds $25,000,000 in contracts.

The newest Wichita company, Culver Aircraft, is humming with three shifts a day or more than $1,000,000 in contracts for cabin ships. Workers lists have been more than doubled.

Increased traffic has prompted city and federal officials to replan Wichita's highway system, and an expected $3,000,000 federal appropriation, added to city and state money, will revamp highway outlets from all national defense plants, speed travel through the city and set up safety features.

City officials are jubilant, but they are not letting the boom override good judgment. They point out that Wichita was one of the first air-minded cities in the country, that its central location always was a natural attraction for air travel, and that it has started planning with a $250,000,000 airport—one of the most modern in the country.

Says Low-Cost Gas Masks Will Become Available

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa.—(INS)—Chemical officers at the U. S. Military post here, where the famous 28th division is encamped, predict that gas masks will soon be made available to the public at a small cost.

Army orders for soft training type masks are practically filled and rubber companies are now about ready to manufacture civilian masks, it was stated. The soft rubber masks, which are well-fitted for civilian use, are used by the army merely for training purposes.

For actual fighting conditions, a tougher combat mask is employed. Production of these will soon get underway.

Each soldier is being equipped with a gas mask, it was disclosed. "We aim to have the soldiers thoroughly prepared," said a 28th division officer, who added that "the average civilian will get to a store for a mask about three jumps ahead of the gas."

Miss Elizabeth Shipman
Gasco Food Lecturer

Miss Shipman heads the staff of food specialists who present the programs of "The Great American Food Fare"—the 1942 version of the Gasco Food Institute.

Clear blue burns the flame of gas in over 17,000,000 American homes — itself a salute to gas as America's favorite cooking fuel. No fuel available for kitchen use possesses so many desirable qualities. For every cooking job — and for automatic refrigeration, too — there's nothing like the efficiency and economy of gas. This is why so many American housewives have pronounced gas the ideal kitchen fuel. In the programs of "The Great American Food Fare" you'll witness the latest, most modern applications of this popular fuel. Methods of food preparation, like everything else, are constantly changing. Every modern homemaker wants to keep abreast of these changes. Here's your opportunity to see modern American cookery at its best with gas and modern gas appliances.

NAVY'S SLOGAN NOW STRESSES 'LEARN A TRADE'

Need For Skill Pressing, So 'See the World' Is Cast Aside.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The Navy's slogan "Join the Navy and See the World" has been sidelined, the emphasis placed on the advantages of learning a skilled trade, and the results are excellent, Capt. F. E. M. Whiting reports.

A campaign is under way in three Middle Western states to impress potential recruits with the fact that the navy will teach them a trade they can use to advantage if, and when, they return to civilian life, he said.

"The present drive," Whiting said, "is centered in Indiana, Missouri and Iowa and has jumped enlistments way above the normal average for this time of the year."

"At the present rate about 10,600 men a month are joining the navy and by the end of the year we expect to enlist a monthly average of 12,000." The normal average last year was about 8,000 a month.

Already 5,500 recruits a month are sent to trade schools as soon as they have completed their preliminary training and when schooling facilities are expanded it is expected that more than 50 per cent of all new recruits will fill the classrooms. These schools are owned and operated by the navy.

Glancing through some of the recruiting pamphlets shows that the navy offers the future sailor his money's worth. In fact, the entire training is free—and the first year of it is said to be worth $1,500.

The literature lists about 45 trades in which blue jackets can become experts, and extolls the advantages and pay the service offers them. As an added inducement, it gives concrete examples that show how successful former sailors have become as result of their training.

To name only a couple are T. A. Morgan, president of the Sperry Gyroscope company, Brooklyn, N. Y., who became an electrician's mate and specialized in ships' compasses. Harry E. Gould, retired general manager of Bethlehem Steel's Fore River, Mass., shipbuilding plant, returned to civilian life when a chief machinist. He says: "Navy training was a tremendous asset."

"There are many others, in all walks of life," Whiting disclosed, "and although we can't keep track of all of them, the majority merely have swapped their sailor garb for civilian clothes and become important figures in their respective fields."

Later the recruiting drive will be shifted to Kentucky, Kansas and Nebraska, Whiting said, and after that to Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland. "Before it's all over we expect to cover the country."

When asked how many bluejackets had left the service in the past 10 years, he disclosed it was about 38,000. "We'd like to get them all back," he said, "but apparently they all have good jobs."

LAMBERT-FELVER VOWS READ SUNDAY

Open Church Service United Young Mansfielders Before Altar of First Lutheran Church; Couple To Reside At 596 Bigelow Road.

MISS MARY ALICE LAMBRIGHT, daughter of Mrs. Minnie Lambright, 395 Henry street, exchanged nuptial vows with Richard I. Felver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray O. Felver, 596 Bigelow road, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock before the altar of the First Lutheran church. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer officiated in the presence of many relatives and friends. Palms formed an attractive background for the seven branch candelabra which illuminated the scene of the ceremony.

Preceding the service nuptial music was played by Mrs. Clayson D. Bell, whose selections were "Evening Star" by Wagner, "Because" by D'Hardelot, "Just a Wearyin' for You" by Bond and "Ave Maria" by Schubert. Miss Geraldine Harley was the soloist, singing "The Sunshine of Your Smile" by Ray, "I 'Love You Truly'" by Bond and "O Promise Me" by DeKoven.

William H. Lambright gave his sister in marriage. She wore a white duchess satin gown, fashioned with a long waistline and tight bodice which was attached to a full skirt and long train. The sleeves were full at the shoulders and narrowed down the arm, coming to a point over the hands. The veil of bridal illusion was finger tip length with a crown of seed pearls. Her jewelry was three gold keys representing the bridegroom's fraternal affiliations, and a garnet ring encircled with diamonds, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a white testament covered with a white orchid.

Miss Eleanor Carver was maid of honor. Her formal frock was of rust taffeta, made similarly to that of the bride's. Her hair was covered with a short veil in matching color which fell from ostrich tips placed at the back of the head. Mrs. David Gregg, twin sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her frock was of green taffeta of the same style and the veil and ostrich tips were of corresponding shade. Both young women carried bouquets of yellow and copper colored button chrysanthemums and roses.

As the guests arrived at the church they were shown to their seats by H. Maxwell Snodgrass of Akron, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, William Scott of Mansfield, Robert Harnett of Akron, Charles Eugene Spry of Pittsburgh, Pa., college friend of the groom. R. Ralph Felver of this city was his brother's best man.

Mrs. Lambright attended her daughter's wedding in a navy blue ensemble and a gardenia corsage Soldier blue was the color of Mrs. Felver's attractive costume and she wore a gardenia corsage.

Reception at Couple's Home.

Following the ceremony a reception for 75 guests was held at the couple's newly furnished apartment on Bigelow road. The serving table was centered with a tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bridal couple. Tall lighted tapers cast a soft glow over the refreshment board. Mrs. H. K. Painter, aunt of the bride, presided.

Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Felver left for an extended trip through the east. For traveling the bride wore a chartreuse and black velvet ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of orchids. Upon their return they will reside at 596 Bigelow road, Woodland.

Mrs. Felver was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and has been employed in the shipping office at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. Mr. Felver was graduated from Akron university and took post graduate work at Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh. He is employed as an industrial designer at the Westinghouse.

Suits Popular For All Types Say Designers

Sally Milgrim looked to the Arabs for her "tent pole" silhouette, especially good for tall women. Straight and slimming, it is softened by folds and drapes. Fabrics show the influence of reed mat weaving, and the wool dress with jacket or coat of the same weave in heavier weight is stressed. Colors borrowed from the Near East emphasize blues—midnight, a turquoise-peacock tone, and pale aqua tints. Gay reds, rose tones and greens, running from vivids to subtle casts, appeared. But the "treasure chest gold," a warm toast color, took the most votes at the opening.

Sophie Gimbel perfects the trim, short-jacket suit with unusual blouse. Her new "plastic seaming" consists of curved, pointed or diagonal seams aimed to mould the bust, waist and hips. The jacket of a persimmon red tweed suit in her collection acquires its nipped-on waist by a series of vertical gores across the back, modelling the waistline. She twists the fabric of suit and blouse together to make a hat.

Fira Benenson thinks of a letter S for her silhouette. It seems straight and narrow, but actually bosoms are curved, waistlines are concave and she remembers the forgotten derriere with traceries of back movement. A believer in prettiness, she chooses fabulously beautiful fabrics, often with an old-fashioned look. To make your suit warmer for winter, the tippet—likey our grandmother's fur one, but made inexpensively of cotton velveteen—is picturesque.

Von Endt-Gettles Nuptials Read In Marion Church

In a quiet ceremony, Saturday, before the altar of the Methodist church in Marion, Miss Louise Von Endt, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Von Endt, Marion, became the bride of Lieut. Roland B. Gettles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gettles, 142 Rae avenue. Rev. Mauk read the open church service at 3:30 p. m. before an altar decorated with beauty baskets of yellow chrysanthemums against a background of ferns.

For her wedding the bride was attired in a Nut Shell brown street length frock with dark brown accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of a yellow orchid. Her only jewelry was a gold locket. Preceding and during the ceremony organ selections were played. Some of the numbers were "Songs My Mother Taught Me," "None But the Lonely Heart," "Intermezzo," "Indian Love Call," "Sweet Mystery of Life," "Because" and "Liebestraum."

Mrs. Von Endt appeared at her daughter's wedding in a black street length frock with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow rose buds. Mrs. Gettles wore a frock of Defense blue with matching accessories and a yellow rose bud corsage. Following the ceremony a reception was held for a few close friends and members of the immediate families at Ringer's Inn Luncheon was served at one long table and small tables decorated with fall flowers and lighter tapers. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple.

Following the reception the couple left for a short wedding trip. For traveling the bride wore a black and white ensemble with black accessories. After Nov. 16 they will reside at Fayettville, N. C., where Lieut. Gettles is stationed at Fort Bragg.

The former Miss Von Endt is a graduate of Marion high school and has been employed at the Prudential Insurance company. Mr. Gettles is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school and Ohio State university. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Gettles and son, John, of Milwaukee, Wis., were the only out-of-town guests in attendance.

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEADING THE WEAKER

In the old days many players learned the admonition to lead the fourth-best from their "longest and strongest" suit against a No Trump contract. Experience has proved it pays to make an exception, with two suits of equal length, when certain conditions prevail. Sometimes it is better, then, to lead the weaker of the two suits Usually the choice is between two four-card suits, as seldom will you have two five-carders against a No Trump, but if you do the same general considerations count.

1. ♠ J 9 4 3 ♥ A 8 5 2 ♦ 7 6 4 ♣ 8 3
2. ♠ Q J 10 8 ♥ 9 6 5 2 ♦ 7 6 4 ♣ 8 3
3. ♠ 8 7 6 3 ♥ K J 5 2 ♦ 7 6 4 ♣ 8 3
4. ♠ 10 9 7 6 ♥ 8 6 5 2 ♦ K 6 4 ♣ Q 7
5. ♠ 6 5 4 2 ♥ J 9 7 3 ♦ 10 6 4 ♣ 8 3
6. ♠ J 9 7 3 ♥ 6 5 4 2 ♦ Q 6 4 ♣ 8 7

Presuming in every case that neither hearts nor spades had been bid, and that the contract is 3-No Trumps, the lead preferred by most experts from each of the above hands would be a spade, the fourth-best in all instances except No. 2, the Q.

With No. 1, if a spade is led, the heart A stands as a sure side entry to help you bring in a set-up spade later on, whereas if a heart be led, the spade suit can't aid you.

No. 3 is another sort of case in which you lead the weaker suit—because a lead from the heart tenace might cost a trick, whereas if it is held for later use it may take a couple of tricks and also may act as re-entry for spade tricks.

No 5 presents a case of a hand so worthless that trying to build up a trick in it is almost hopeless. So you try to help your partner take tricks in the suit in which he is most likely to be strong, spades, since it is the major in which you are weaker

The even-numbered hands are all cases of leading the stronger suit In No. 2, you have some chance to set up a spade trick and score it, even without side entries, whereas the high cards in it would be "too late" to be of much value as re-entries for heart tricks. In No. 4, you have equally good entries for both majors, with a better chance to get a spade set up In No 6, you have a hand by no means worthless, since the diamond Q is a possible re-entry. A spade would be chosen by most advanced students because of its being nearer to being set up than the heart suit.

Send Cookies To Your Boys In Camps

By BETSY NEWMAN

I suppose you're all sending boxes of cookies, candy and cigarets to your boys in the camps. I thought maybe I'd vary the usual menu by giving you some tried and true recipes for cookies that the boys will like.

Today's Menu.

Creamed Dried Beef on Toast
Fried Noodles
Cabbage, Pepper and Celery Salad
Stewed Fruit Cookies
Tea or Coffee

* * *

Ginger Snaps.

2 cps. molasses
1 cp. lard
1 tbsp. ginger
1 tsp. soda
2 tbsps. water
4 cps. flour (about)

Combine first 3 ingredients and let come to a boil, then cool a little. Add soda dissolved in water, and flour enough to make a soft dough Roll out very thin and bake in quick oven (400° F.).

* * *

Marshmallow Fudge Cookies.

2 sqs. chocolate, shaved
1 cp. evaporated milk
2 cps. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. butter
1 tsp. vanilla extract
24 marshmallows, cut in pieces
3 cps. graham cracker crumbs
1 cp walnut meat, finely chopped

Combine chocolate and milk and place over low heat until chocolate is melted Add sugar and salt, then stir until dissolved Cook until mixture reaches soft ball stage (228° F.). Remove from heat and add butter. Cool slightly, then add marshmallows, vanilla extract, graham cracker crumbs and walnut meats Mix well, press into well-greased pans, chill 8 to 12 hours, or over night, then cut in squares. Makes 4 dozen squares

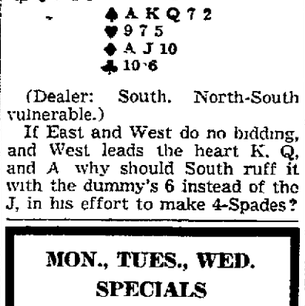
* * *

Chocolate Cookies.

½ cp. butter
1 cp. sugar
1 egg
2 sqs. chocolate, melted
¼ cp. milk
2 cps. flour
⅛ tsp. salt
1½ tsps. allphosphate baking powder.

Beat butter and sugar to a cream, add egg, then melted chocolate and milk. Sift together flour, salt and baking powder, and add to other ingredients. Roll out thinly, cut into rounds and bake on greased pans in hot oven.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

If East and West do no bidding, and West leads the heart K, Q, and A why should South ruff it with the dummy's 6 instead of the J, in his effort to make 4-Spades?

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I know," I told the nurse despondently, "but just now I can't see any way out It's an obsession of Mrs. Underwood's that she must be in this house and within reach of the telephone at all times, lest Marion come to the house or telephone, and find her mother is away"

"Your father appears to be all-powerful," Miss Whitlock replied, and something in her manner told me that she was deeply concerned over her patient's mental welfare. "Can't he think of some ruse to get her away from here, and busy her with something which she would consider a vital necessity?"

"He could do it if anyone could," I admitted "but you have no idea how adamant Mrs. Underwood can be if she decides she has a duty in any direction."

'Oh, haven't I?" the nurse countered, and there was a touch of grimness in her smile "On the contrary, I have an exceedingly definite and settled notion concerning her unusual will power, shall we say?"

"You might call it obstinancy," I said with a wry little smile 'Are you going to do these dishes now? I'll help you."

"No, indeed," she said, deftly piling the dishes into a pan which she had filled with hot water and a mild soap powder "I'll let these soak until I have time to do them But if you'll get a wiping towel out of that drawer we can do the silver in a jiffy If the rest waits it won't matter"

The silver was washed wiped and put away with a rapidity that almost justified Miss Whitlock's boast. Then we hurried upstairs again, finding Lillian stretched out on the couch with her big husband sitting protectively beside her

"Give them time Sweet," he was saying as we entered, but Lillian turned to me with a querulous appeal of a sort utterly foreign to her.

Worried About Telegram.

"What do you think, Madge? Shouldn't that Western Union man have reported upon the location of that call before this?"

"I don't see how they could have managed it in this time," I told her a bit mendaciously, for I had seen some wonderful performances on the part of telegraph operatives.

"You see, Sweet,"—her husband quickly confirmed the first part of "that call no doubt came from—"

The shrilling of the telephone interrupted his sentence, and Lillian rose to a sitting posture so quickly that her husband had no opportunity to stop her.

"Oh, that must be the man now!" she cried. "Answer it, somebody, quick!"

I took down the receiver with hands that trembled, and nodded at Lillian as I heard the voice on the other end of the wire.

"That's who it is," I said to her, and then the voice was asking: "Did you wish to know who sent that telegram to Mrs. Underwood this morning?"

"Yes, I did," I answered, then added breathlessly, "Did you find out?"

"Sorry," came the efficient yet perfunctory inflections from the other end of the wire. "We cannot give you any helpful information. That telegram was telephoned from one of the public telephones in the Grand Central station As you probably will realize, it is simply impossible to trace the sender of such a call as that. If it had been sent over our public service telephones here—"

"Of course that would have been another matter," I interrupted smoothly, for there was no use wasting any more time in listening. "I am sure you have done everything possible. Thank you so much."

"We are glad to have been of service," the perfunctory voice said with equal smoothness, and then I replaced the receiver, turned to the expectant group across the room and repeated the information the man had given me

"Then we're just where we were before," Lillian said despondently.

"Except," said her husband thoughtfully, "that we have two extra points cinched."

Stick to It If You Tell Child "No"

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: Our only son, 3½, used always to take a nap in the afternoon for 2 hours or more and to sleep at night from seven to seven. He is healthy and full of pep, never still a minute. He loves to have us read to him.

"Starting over a week ago, he won't take his nap and doesn't want to go to bed at night or if he goes is up in a couple of hours and won't go back. I whipped him one afternoon till it hurt me and didn't bother him. I told him he would stay in his room till he slept. He threw things and marked the walls till I had to get him to save the room.

"At night he will sleep if we let him sleep with us as we had to do to get some sleep ourselves. Still it is uncomfortable and we are as far away from a solution as ever.

"I hope you will have a suggestion that will help us. For your convenience I am enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope."

The Doctor's Reply.

Before you try further to train your child to stay in his own bed, educate him while he is awake by day in the unambiguous meaning of NO. Settle on a few things he must never do. When he does any of them, assign him at once to sit in a chair doing nothing where you can see him, for exactly twenty minutes.

Don't hold him there or tie him The moment he leaves the chair, even for an inch, spank him soundly with your hand. Continue in this way till he stays in the chair as commanded. Be sure not to yell at him or threaten him with words or gestures. Keep your lips sealed, except to talk to him while in the chair when he wishes to talk about other things than his punishment

One Problem at a Time.

Read to him several times a day. Now and then when he is good take him on your knee and cuddle him, even rock him. Enjoy his crude creations. Answer all his questions kindly.

Once he has learned the meaning of NO while up, attack the nap problem. With it settled, work on the bedtime and night problem. As you tuck him in for his nap, tell him only once not to get up. Leave the door ajar so you can, without his seeing you, see him as he gets up. Then spank him. Be always there when he goes to take his nap and continue the same routine until he learns to stay down. It may take several days.

On the enclosed folder which lists and describes my 15 pamphlets on the baby and young child, I have marked the one on discipline and the one on sleep.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, Nov. 11.

According to the interesting astral configurations this day should be a particularly active and enterprising one, with all things moving at unusually high tempo. It should be a time for rapid-fire action, with new and important projects being accelerated to swift and successful conclusion by indomitable will, perseverance and high-pressure plans that are constructive, practical as well as daring.

Those whise birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of splendid accomplishment, inaugurated and carried to successful issues largely by courage, strength, and determination, with faith in sound and well-organized plans for important projects or spectacular public support or co-operation from quarters where it might be expected.

A child born on this day should have much initiative and enterprise as well as sound ideas and practical objectives, which may carry it on to achievements of major scope by its own will and constructive abilities.

Where Should the Funeral Be Held?

While we are equipped to serve anywhere, there is a growing tendency toward funerals in our Funeral Home. Many prefer this to avoid memories of a funeral in the family home, others for the larger seating capacity.

The Finefrock Funeral Home is ideal There is seating capacity for 400 persons, yet a private funeral can be an intimate service in one of the parlors.

Funerals held here cost no more. Our charges are the same whether a funeral is held in a church, the family home or our Funeral Home.

GALION POLICE PROBE SERIES OF ACCIDENTS

Clevelander Fined $100 on Driving Charge After Accident.

GALION — Bad visibility, slippery streets, and intoxicated drivers were given as the cause of several accidents reported by Galion police over the week-end.

LaVerne Filsinger who gave his address as Cleveland was fined $100 and costs in Mayor W. M. King's court Sunday, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol.

Mrs. George Coble of the Bucyrus-Galion road suffered injuries in an automobile accident at the South State road and Harding Way West intersection Saturday night.

Mrs. Coble was driving east, and another car, driven by Dale Shumaker of west of Galion, was making a left-hand turn into the Thompson filling station. The Shumaker car collided with Mrs. Coble's machine.

Treated by a Galion physician, Mrs. Coble suffered a knee injury, bruised nose, loosened teeth and mouth injuries.

Mrs. Shumaker, riding with her husband, also was bruised considerably. The Coble car was badly damaged, while the other car received only slight damage.

Earlier in the evening James B. Heard of Crestline, was leaving his parking place on Harding Way East in front of the Lower dry cleaning establishment, when he applied brakes and skidded his car into the rear of another machine driven by Richard Judson Hildreth of Mansfield who had stopped behind Louis Metzger's car for a red light. The Hildreth car struck the rear of the Metzger car, all three cars being damaged, but no one injured.

Cars driven by W. E. Taylor of Summit street and J. M. Scribner, also of Galion, were damaged when Scribner was leaving his parking place on South Market street near Walnut street.

BRITISH BALK AT CONCESSIONS FOR LEASE-LEND AID FROM U. S.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — There are strong indications in official quarters in Washington today that Great Britain is none too eager to grant the concessions the United States is requesting in return for the billions of dollars worth of lend-lease aid which this country is giving to the British empire.

Slow progress is being made in the discussions between the two governments for the conclusion of the far-reaching agreement which the United States is seeking.

The United States is asking for the following three major concessions in return for the lend-lease aid which has been given and will be given in the future:

1. The right to use at any time in the future, even after the war is over, any of the naval or military bases of the British empire which may be vital for American national defense purposes.

2. Acceptance of Secretary of State Hull's trade principles as the basis for establishment of a sound international economic system when the war is over.

3. A more equitable control of such vital raw materials as rubber and tin, over which Britain now exercises a virtual monopoly.

The American proposals were submitted to the British government in London the middle of September. They have not yet been accepted.

Furthermore, the state department formally notified congress the latter part of September that plans for the agreement had reached the stage of negotiation. British quarters in Washington, however now assert there are no negotiations, but merely discussions. They also give the impression that the discussions are likely to go on for a long time.

In fact, the British are taking the position that the most important thing to do is to win the war, and talk about the agreement this government has in mind when victory is won.

Remembering Woodrow Wilson's difficulties at the Paris peace conference at the end of the last World war, American officials are none too sure that it will be as easy to obtain acceptance of the American plan when Great Britain is no longer as dependent for its existence on lend-lease aid as it is at present.

GEN. JOHNSON: Labor Faces Defense Strike Showdown

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — It was the greatest possible break for Britain, and for us to the extent that we have married her, for the two guerillas Hitler and Stalin to turn on each other and begin clawing out each other's vitals just when they did.

Maybe as part of that poker game it is all right for us to slip Stalin a billion dollars—over $30 for every family in the United States. Stalin has to be bolstered because if he can't save his European empire, he is just as likely to turn up on the German side overnight to save his own hide. It is a physical impossibility for us to deliver a billion dollars worth of supplies through the long and dangerous channels of communication in one or two years.

Just the same, it was a nice gesture and may help to answer Stalin's slightly veiled demand that we send a new A. E. F. to fight for Russia.

The catch in sending anything is the danger of cutting the railroad from Moscow to the White sea. The Finns are in a possible position to do that. They also probably consider it necessary for the security of their own frontiers.

But, regardless of our past friendship with Finland, we are so eager to help Russia that none of these things counts and we are on record in our aid to the democracies and against the dictators and aggressors in telling Finland (about the only true democracy in this field) to stop fighting Russia which is one of the greatest aggressors and bloodiest dictatorships in the world and has scarcely wiped her own mouth clean of the ravished Finland and the Baltic states.

The point of all this to me is not objection to military aid to Russia which I think is necessary to keep Hitler's face turned east but the maze of hypocrisy into which the method of rendering that aid is leading us.

Take for example the president's "felicitations" to Kalinin on the birthday of the Bolshevist revolution. That was the revolution that destroyed the Kerensky democracy which we had helped to install in place of the autocracy of the czar. It resulted in the bloodiest reign of terror in history. Following it, began a regime in which the Russian plan of world revolution attempted to infiltrate every country, including our own, with Trojan horses and fifth columnists to overthrow their governments.

Since then the Russian government has so penetrated and absorbed every country it could. It has our own unions, government and other institutions well sprinkled with people at least sympathetic with their methods. They have sabotaged our defense effort and done great harm in other directions.

It isn't nice to talk this way but it is the truth. If we don't keep it constantly in mind, the first thing we know, blatant Communist agents here who have already crawled out of their dog houses are going to be literally basking in governmental favor. What they can accomplish is almost beyond conjecture—especially with a billion dollars to spend. Nobody wants to see Hitler conquer Europe but I hope nobody wants to see Stalin conquer it either. His aims are about the same as Hitler's but he could be the greater danger.

SEE NEUTRALITY BILL READY FOR FDR THURSDAY

Leaders Agree House Vote on Senate 3-Point Revision Will Be Close.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.)— The house rules committee today approved arrangements for eight hours of house debate on the administration's neutrality revision program permitting American merchant vessels to sail to belligerent ports.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders predicted flatly today the house would have the senate's broad, three-point revision of the neutrality act ready for President Roosevelt's signature by Thursday night but they agreed with Republicans that the vote might be comparatively close.

Speaker Rayburn said administration forces believed they had the strength to force house acceptance of senate amendments to the original house ship arming bill which broadened the legislation to permit vessels to enter combat zones and belligerent ports.

Neither he nor Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, would predict the majority they expected. They said, however, there was little chance that the vote would be as great as the 259 to 138 tally on the single issue of repealing provisions of the act prohibiting the placing of guns on cargo vessels. (The house membership is 435.)

Rep. Knutson (R., Minn.) one of the two present house members who voted against the declaration of war resolution in 1917 said his "guess" was that the house would not acquiesce because there were a number of members who voted for the first repealer who had said they would vote for no more.

Rep. Jonkman (R., Mich.), foreign affairs committeeman, reported that the administration victory might be from "one or two votes or 50" and saw a chance that "we might even defeat the amendments."

Rep Mundt (R., S. D.), another committeeman, said the Democrats would be "surprised by the number who voted for ship arming who are committed against the other repealer" and would cast their votes against them.

But Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the committee estimated that the administration would win with a majority of 75 to 100.

The house voted Oct. 17 to repeal the prohibition against ship arming by a majority of 121. The roll call showed that 219 Democrats joined with 39 Republicans and one American-Laborite to make up the total of 259, while 21 Democrats, 113 Republicans, three Progressives and one Farmer-Laborite accounted for the total of 138.

The senate's vote Friday was: 43 Democrats, 6 Republicans, 1 Independent for; 15 Democrats, 21 Republicans, Progressive, against.

FDR Waits Reply To Detroit Walkout Plea; Railway Unions Set To Quit.

BULLETIN

SAN DIEGO, Calif.— (U.P.) — Work on 10 military projects involving $35,000,000 in contracts, was halted today when 3,000 AFL workers walked out in a general building trades strike. Wage increases of $1 a day per man were demanded.

(By United Press)

Labor approached a showdown with government officials today in disputes jeopardizing the defense program.

AFL building tradesmen threatened a general strike, defying the navy department, on defense projects at San Diego, Cal.; President Roosevelt awaited an answer to his second appeal for striking Detroit teamsters to resume work at the Railway Express agency; and railway unions, which have rejected a government board's wage recommendations, expected presidential intervention.

At San Diego, all AFL construction workers on government projects were called to a meeting today to discuss a call for a general strike on 10 projects. K. G. Bitter, secretary of the AFL Building Trades council, who had ordered the general strike, called the meeting.

The general strike order was the union response to a navy department ultimatum, demanding that the strikers return to work today or lose their jobs. The navy said contractors would be permitted to hire other labor or the government would employ civil service workers.

A general strike would interrupt work on projects costing $25,000,000. Union members, who have demanded wage increases of approximately $1 daily, were confident that replacements could not be found. Their original walkout involved three projects valued at $10,500,000.

Settlement of the Railway Express strike at Detroit awaited word from Daniel J. Tobin, international president of the AFL teamsters. Tobin rejected President Roosevelt's first appeal and said after the second that he could not order the men to resume work without authority of the union executive board members, who could not be assembled before Monday.

Mr. Roosevelt has appointed an emergency board to mediate the dispute between the teamsters and AFL railway clerks. The clerks struck first, demanding a wage increase and protesting recognition of the teamsters.

They later voted to end the strike and submit the dispute to the national railway labor mediation board. Teamsters refused to accept the board's mediation and then Mr Roosevelt intervened when Tobin threatened to call sympathy strikes in eight other major cities.

Representatives of the five operating railroad brotherhoods adjourned yesterday, announcing they would strike "on or about Dec 5" because of dissatisfaction with the wage proposals of the presidential fact-finding board. They were certain the president would seek further negotiations to prevent a transportation stoppage during the defense emergency.

The way out of the crisis that threatens the world today lies "not in war but in statesmanship based on the principles enunciated by Jesus Christ," Rev. Grover E. Swoyer told an audience of 1,000 attending the pre-Armistice day patriotic religious service in First Lutheran church Sunday night.

Sponsored by Earl McVey post of the American Legion the service was largely attended by veteran and patriotic organizations of the city and the choir of 100 voices brought singers from all churches of the city together under the direction of Legionnaire John C. Klinger.

Three Armistice day events are scheduled for Tuesday beginning at 10:45 a. m. when the Legion auxiliary holds a memorial service at the Doughboy monument in Central park. A parade at 7:30 p. m., following a dinner at the Legion home, will climax the day's ceremonies.

Rev. Swoyer, post chaplain, will deliver the short discourse at the Doughboy monument Tuesday morning and a memorial wreath will be placed at the foot of the monument by Mrs. R B Gardner, auxiliary chaplain.

R. B. Gardner, past department commander of the American Legion, will act as grand marshal of the parade leaving the Legion home at 7:30 p. m. and proceeding east on Park avenue west to Central park.

The Ohio State Guard will hold a retreat ceremony at the west side of the park and the parade will move from there north on Main street to West Fourth street, west on Fourth to Mulberry, south on Mulberry to Park avenue west, and west to the Legion home.

TELEGRAPHER WHO RECEIVED MESSAGES FROM EDISON DIES

Corydon P. Ross, 77, who once received telegraphic messages sent by Thomas Edison, died this morning in Mansfield General hospital from a brain concussion suffered in a fall at his home, 77 Dawson avenue, yesterday.

Born March 2, 1864, in Ontario, Mr. Ross taught penmanship in Wayne and Ashland county schools before starting work as a telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania railroad system.

It was while he was employed by the railroad that he received messages from Edison who was also a railroad telegrapher.

In 1916 he and Glenn McKinley formed the McKinley Roofing company in Mansfield and he remained in Mansfield from then until his death. He retired from active work in 1924 living on his Springfield township farm and his home on Dawson avenue.

BAFFLES POLICE

New Evidence Indicates Lima Slaying Hour Change.

LIMA—(AP)—Evidence that Mrs Goldie Siler, 45, was strangled with a silk stocking only an hour before her body was found last Thursday morning added mystery to the crime as investigators pressed for its solution today.

Authorities, who hold an ex-convict who said he accompanied Mrs. Siler home from a night club in a taxicab at about 1:15 a. m. Thursday, had believed she was slain several hours before her body was found at 8 a. m. on the grounds of the Ohio Hospital for the Criminal Insane where she was an attendant.

Officers were puzzled for a motive as an autopsy dismissed a rape theory, and the woman had not been robbed.

BRITISH BALK AT CONCESSIONS FOR LEASE-LEND AID FROM U. S.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — There are strong indications in official quarters in Washington today that Great Britain is none too eager to grant the concessions the United States is requesting in return for the billions of dollars worth of lend-lease aid which this country is giving to the British empire.

Slow progress is being made in the discussions between the two governments for the conclusion of the far-reaching agreement which the United States is seeking.

The United States is asking for the following three major concessions in return for the lend-lease aid which has been given and will be given in the future:

1. The right to use at any time in the future, even after the war is over, any of the naval or military bases of the British empire which may be vital for American national defense purposes.

2. Acceptance of Secretary of State Hull's trade principles as the basis for establishment of a sound international economic system when the war is over.

3. A more equitable control of such vital raw materials as rubber and tin, over which Britain now exercises a virtual monopoly.

The American proposals were submitted to the British government in London the middle of September They have not yet been accepted.

Furthermore, the state department formally notified congress the latter part of September that plans for the agreement had reached the stage of negotiation. British quarters in Washington, however, now assert there are no negotiations, but merely discussions. They also give the impression that the discussions are likely to go on for a long time.

In fact, the British are taking the position that the most important thing to do is to win the war, and talk about the agreement this government has in mind when victory is won.

Remembering Woodrow Wilson's difficulties at the Paris peace conference at the end of the last World war, American officials are none too sure that it will be as easy to obtain acceptance of the American plan when Great Britain is no longer as dependent for its existence on lend-lease aid as it is at present.

GEN. JOHNSON: Labor Faces Defense Strike Showdown

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — It was the greatest possible break for Britain, and for us to the extent that we have married her, for the two guerillas Hitler and Stalin to turn on each other and begin clawing out each other's vitals just when they did.

Maybe as part of that poker game it is all right for us to slip Stalin a billion dollars—over $30 for every family in the United States. Stalin has to be bolstered because if he can't save his European empire, he is just as likely to turn up on the German side overnight to save his own hide. It is a physical impossibility for us to deliver a billion dollars worth of supplies through the long and dangerous channels of communication in one or two years.

Just the same, it was a nice gesture and may help to answer Stalin's slightly veiled demand that we send a new A. E. F. to fight for Russia.

The catch in sending anything is the danger of cutting the railroad from Moscow to the White sea. The Finns are in a possible position to do that. They also probably consider it necessary for the security of their own frontiers.

But, regardless of our past friendship with Finland, we are so eager to help Russia that none of these things counts and we are on record in our aid to the democracies and against the dictators and aggressors in telling Finland (about the only true democracy in this field) to stop fighting Russia which is one of the greatest aggressors and bloodiest dictatorships in the world and has scarcely wiped her own mouth clean of the ravished Finland and the Baltic states.

The point of all this to me is not objection to military aid to Russia which I think is necessary to keep Hitler's face turned east but the maze of hypocrisy into which the method of rendering that aid is leading us.

Take for example the president's "felicitations" to Kalinin on the birthday of the Bolshevist revolution. That was the revolution that destroyed the Kerensky democracy which we had helped to install in place of the autocracy of the czar. It resulted in the bloodiest reign of terror in history. Following it, began a regime in which the Russian plan of world revolution attempted to infiltrate every country, including our own, with Trojan horses and fifth columnists to overthrow their governments.

Since then the Russian government has so penetrated and absorbed every country it could. It has our own unions, government and other institutions well sprinkled with people at least sympathetic with their methods. They have sabotaged our defense effort and done great harm in other directions.

It isn't nice to talk this way but it is the truth. If we don't keep it constantly in mind, the first thing we know, blatant Communist agents here who have already crawled out of their dog houses are going to be literally basking in governmental favor. What they can accomplish is almost beyond conjecture—especially with a billion dollars to spend. Nobody wants to see Hitler conquer Europe but I hope nobody wants to see Stalin conquer it either. His aims are about the same as Hitler's but he could be the greater danger.

SEE NEUTRALITY BILL READY FOR FDR THURSDAY

Leaders Agree House Vote on Senate 3-Point Revision Will Be Close.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.)— The house rules committee today approved arrangements for eight hours of house debate on the administration's neutrality revision program permitting American merchant vessels to sail to belligerent ports.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders predicted flatly today the house would have the senate's broad, three-point revision of the neutrality act ready for President Roosevelt's signature by Thursday night but they agreed with Republicans that the vote might be comparatively close.

Speaker Rayburn said administration forces believed they had the strength to force house acceptance of senate amendments to the original house ship arming bill which broadened the legislation to permit vessels to enter combat zones and belligerent ports.

Neither he nor Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, would predict the majority they expected. They said, however, there was little chance that the vote would be as great as the 259 to 138 tally on the single issue of repealing provisions of the act prohibiting the placing of guns on cargo vessels. (The house membership is 435.)

Rep. Knutson (R., Minn.) one of the two present house members who voted against the declaration of war resolution in 1917 said his "guess" was that the house would not acquiesce because there were a number of members who voted for the first repealer who had said they would vote for no more.

Rep. Jonkman (R., Mich.), foreign affairs committeeman, reported that the administration victory might be from "one or two votes or 50" and saw a chance that "we might even defeat the amendments."

Rep. Mundt (R., S. D.), another committeeman, said the Democrats would be "surprised by the number who voted for ship arming who are committed against the other repealer" and would cast their votes against them.

But Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the committee estimated that the administration would win with a majority of 75 to 100.

The house voted Oct. 17 to repeal the prohibition against ship arming by a majority of 121. The roll call showed that 219 Democrats joined with 39 Republicans and one American-Laborite to make up the total of 259, while 21 Democrats, 113 Republicans, three Progressives and one Farmer-Laborite accounted for the total of 138.

The senate's vote Friday was: 43 Democrats, 6 Republicans, 1 Independent for; 15 Democrats, 21 Republicans, Progressive, against.

Children who flock to the Mansfield Public Library for the story hour every Saturday morning and also to Newman street branch are expected to establish a far larger attendance this season than that chalked up for the past three years. The number this year is steadily climbing and the last story session recorded 47 attendants at the main library and 44 at Newman school. Miss Myra Lorimer and Mrs. Lois Pennell conduct the sessions.

There will be no city or rural delivery tomorrow, except of special delivery letters. You won't be able to register with the unemployment service or file a claim for jobless compensation either, because the local BUC office also will be closed in observance of Armistice day.

Mansfield police were surprised Saturday night to find an auto battery lying in the middle of Harker street. They picked it up and brought it to headquarters. A few minutes later a motorist telephoned headquarters asking if the battery had been found. His motor had failed to operate and he discovered his battery had dropped out after having his car towed to a garage.

FDR Waits Reply To Detroit Walkout Plea; Railway Unions Set To Quit.

BULLETIN

SAN DIEGO, Calif.— (U.P.) — Work on 10 military projects involving $35,000,000 in contracts, was halted today when 3,000 AFL workers walked out in a general building trades strike. Wage increases of $1 a day per man were demanded.

(By United Press)

Labor approached a showdown with government officials today in disputes jeopardizing the defense program.

AFL building tradesmen threatened a general strike, defying the navy department, on defense projects at San Diego, Cal.; President Roosevelt awaited an answer to his second appeal for striking Detroit teamsters to resume work at the Railway Express agency; and railway unions, which have rejected a government board's wage recommendations, expected presidential intervention.

At San Diego, all AFL construction workers on government projects were called to a meeting today to discuss a call for a general strike on 10 projects. K. G. Bitter, secretary of the AFL Building Trades council, who had ordered the general strike, called the meeting.

The general strike order was the union response to a navy department ultimatum, demanding that the strikers return to work today or lose their jobs. The navy said contractors would be permitted to hire other labor or the government would employ civil service workers.

A general strike would interrupt work on projects costing $25,000,000. Union members, who have demanded wage increases of approximately $1 daily, were confident that replacements could not be found. Their original walkout involved three projects valued at $10,500,000.

Settlement of the Railway Express strike at Detroit awaited word from Daniel J. Tobin, international president of the AFL teamsters. Tobin rejected President Roosevelt's first appeal and said after the second that he could not order the men to resume work without authority of the union executive board members, who could not be assembled before Monday.

Mr. Roosevelt has appointed an emergency board to mediate the dispute between the teamsters and AFL railway clerks. The clerks struck first, demanding a wage increase and protesting recognition of the teamsters.

They later voted to end the strike and submit the dispute to the national railway labor mediation board. Teamsters refused to accept the board's mediation and then Mr. Roosevelt intervened when Tobin threatened to call sympathy strikes in eight other major cities.

Representatives of the five operating railroad brotherhoods adjourned yesterday, announcing they would strike "on or about Dec. 5" because of dissatisfaction with the wage proposals of the presidential fact-finding board. They were certain the president would seek further negotiations to prevent a transportation stoppage during the defense emergency.

WAR VETERANS HOLD SERVICE

Armistice Ceremonies Open With Religious Program Sunday Night.

The way out of the crisis that threatens the world today lies "not in war but in statesmanship based on the principles enunciated by Jesus Christ," Rev. Grover E. Swoyer told an audience of 1,000 attending the pre-Armistice day patriotic religious service in First Lutheran church Sunday night.

Sponsored by Earl McVey post of the American Legion the service was largely attended by veteran and patriotic organizations of the city and the choir of 100 voices brought singers from all churches of the city together under the direction of Legionnaire John C. Klinger.

Three Armistice day events are scheduled for Tuesday beginning at 10:45 a. m. when the Legion auxiliary holds a memorial service at the Doughboy monument in Central park. A parade at 7:30 p. m., following a dinner at the Legion home, will climax the day's ceremonies.

Rev. Swoyer, post chaplain, will deliver the short discourse at the Doughboy monument Tuesday morning and a memorial wreath will be placed at the foot of the monument by Mrs. R. B. Gardner, auxiliary chaplain.

R. B. Gardner, past department commander of the American Legion, will act as grand marshal of the parade leaving the Legion home at 7:30 p. m. and proceeding east on Park avenue west to Central park.

The Ohio State Guard will hold a retreat ceremony at the west side of the park and the parade will move from there north on Main street to West Fourth street, west on Fourth to Mulberry, south on Mulberry to Park avenue west, and west to the Legion home.

Post members, Gold Star Mothers and Spanish War veterans will assemble at the Legion home for a dinner at 6 p. m. served by the Legion auxiliary.

TELEGRAPHER WHO RECEIVED MESSAGES FROM EDISON DIES

Corydon P. Ross, 77, who once received telegraphic messages sent by Thomas Edison, died this morning in Mansfield General hospital from a brain concussion suffered in a fall at his home, 77 Dawson avenue, yesterday.

Born March 2, 1864, in Ontario, Mr. Ross taught penmanship in Wayne and Ashland county schools before starting work as a telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania railroad system.

It was while he was employed by the railroad that he received messages from Edison who was also a railroad telegrapher.

Later Mr. Ross became a traveling salesman, selling for the Lockhart suspender company of Philadelphia and the Chester Suspender company of Boston.

In 1916 he and Glenn McKinley formed the McKinley Roofing company in Mansfield and he remained in Mansfield from then until his death. He retired from active work in 1924 living on his Springfield township farm and his home on Dawson avenue.

At one time secretary of the Modern Woodmen of America, he had also belonged to the United Commercial Travelers and Venus lodge, F. and A. M.

Surviving are his widow, Artie; one daughter, Mrs. Marie McKinley of Mansfield, one son, Charles S. Ross of Ashland; four grandchildren, one brother, R. H. Ross of Toledo; and two sisters, Mrs Emma Searight of Carlisle, Pa., and Mrs. Bertha Miller of Perrysville.

The body was taken to the Wappner Funeral home where Rev. D. N. Roller of the First Presbyterian church will conduct services Wednesday at 3 p. m.

Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

BAFFLES POLICE

New Evidence Indicates Lima Slaying Hour Change.

LIMA—(AP)—Evidence that Mrs. Goldie Siler, 45, was strangled with a silk stocking only an hour before her body was found last Thursday morning added mystery to the crime as investigators pressed for its solution today.

Authorities, who hold an ex-convict who said he accompanied Mrs. Siler home from a night club in a taxicab at about 1:15 a. m. Thursday, had believed she was slain several hours before her body was found at 8 a. m. on the grounds of the Ohio Hospital for the Criminal Insane where she was an attendant.

Officers were puzzled for a motive as an autopsy dismissed a rape theory, and the woman had not been robbed.

CHINESE BUILD HUGE AIRFIELD TO ACCOMMODATE U. S. PLANES

(By International News Service)

CHENGCHOW — Two hundred thousand Chinese peasnts have been pressed into service to build a gigantic airfield for the five American flying fortresses expected to reach this country in the near future.

The field, which is situated not far from Chengtu, capital of Szechuen Province, is one of the biggest projects ever undertaken by the Chinese government.

Whole villages have been uprooted to make way for the American "flying machine castles," say travelers from Szechuen. Whole villages of farmers have also been conscripted out of their homes, transported to the field site and set to work in a manner reminiscent of the press gangs that built the Great Wall.

This enormous amount of labor has been found necessary: for China lacks the concrete and steel to build runways Local materials, stone, lumber, crushed rock and dirt plus the labor of thousands of farmers, however, are expected to put the field in shape for American use.

The field, when finished will be entirely under American direction, according to informants. The five fortresses will be piloted and serviced solely by American volunteers, also.

Although the Chinese are extremely grateful for America's gifts, Chinese military men point out that the "fortresses will not be enough to put China's air force on a par with Japan's efficient squadrons

More combat planes are needed to protect the "fortresses" and defend Chinese cities.

One of the boys in the back room who gets around to Shelby and Galion and Crestline and Mt. Gilead and places like that quite frequently tells me that everywhere he goes he meets the same question:

"Is that Mansfield City News team really running out on the Galion Jaycees? When are they going to play?"

Now the boy from the back room admits that this is a question he can't answer, so he comes to me for the answer, and I can give him only part of it. The Mansfield club isn't running out. When they're going to play I wouldn't know.

* * *

Several days ago the Galion paper carried an item that the Jaycees were trying to line up a benefit game with Mansfield for Sunday, Nov. 9.

I asked Ed Zediker, Mansfield guard, how about that. "Coach Earl McMullen and Manager Fred Rizzo and I went to Galion just the other night," says Ed, "to see if they wanted a game for Nov. 9, or whether we should take a chance to go to Wyandotte, Mich., on that date. They told us they had a team of college all-stars for the 9th."

* * *

So the charges of "run-out" fly back and forth, and fans from the entire area are getting steamed up over an eventual Mansfield-Galion game, but by the time the two teams get together the steam is liable to disappear in a snowstorm.

* * *

"At first I didn't care whether we played Galion or not," says City News Sam Saprano. "We had a established team and they were just starting, and it didn't look like they'd give us any competition.

"But since they started accusing us of running out on them, I've gotten so much ribbing from fans that this is now the one and only game I want.

"I'll bet there were fifty fans who asked me Saturday if we were running out. That's too many, and that's too much."

* * *

And so the Mansfielders renew that famous Coolidge saying:

"We do not choose to run—out."

Barons, Hershey Tie For Lead

INDIANAPOLIS — (INS) — In their rush to the top of the Western division of the American Hockey league, the Cleveland Barons today had only the Hershey Bears hard on their trail.

* * *

After playing a 3-3 overtime tie with the Indianapolis Capitals Saturday night in Cleveland, the Barons pulled a 2-2 deadlock out of the fire last night when Art Giroux beat Goalie Joe Turner with 63 seconds left in the final period.

* * *

The Caps pulled away to an early 2-0 lead, but Giroux's two goals and one by Capt. Bill McKenzie gave the Barons the 3-2 edge.

Hershey outlasted Washington to win, 4-3, and tie Cleveland for the Western section top.

Buckeyes Prep for Illinois

Return To Earth After Wild Saturday Victory.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Back to earth with a thud, Ohio State's football team today was thinking only about the 34 points scored by Wisconsin Saturday instead of the 46 they themselves compiled as they turned their attention to next Saturday — and the foxy Bob Zuppke's Illini.

"Sure, it was a great game," said Paul E. Brown, youthful coach of the scarlet horde, as he and his boys recuperated from one of the wildest melees the western conference has ever inscribed on its records, "but I can't help wondering what will be the reaction of my boys next Saturday when they meet an entirely different problem.

"Against Wisconsin, they expected to play "hit and run" football and get out there and outscore the Badgers. Illinois won't be as tough to handle when they get the ball but on the other hand we aren't going to run wild either. I'm looking for a tight, tough game all the way and all I wish is that we could have a few of those points laid by for next Saturday."

Realizing that attempting to analyze Saturday's battle with the Badgers was about as fruitful as searching for the chemical explanation of an exploding firecracker, Brown nevertheless had a definite idea of what happened to Ohio's own defense Saturday while the Buckeye attack was running hog wild.

He ascribed Wisconsin's scoring ability against his team to one major factor, namely, one of the finest passing attacks any team has ever faced.

"This Seelinger is really a marvelous passer," Brown said. "His record against us (15 completions out of 28) proves that. We tried to meet it by using a five man line part of the time and when we did, it enabled the Wisconsin backs to get loose for long ground gains. Of course, our line was fooled at times by the tricky way the Badgers put their plays in operation, but on the other hand, lots of other teams have been fooled by the Badgers too. Furthermore, they blocked like demons in there. Naturally we'll work on a lot of defensive weaknesses revealed in this game but on the whole, I'm not much worried by the fact that they scored as many poios as they did. It was just that kind of a game."

Ohio's own offense reached a peak of efficiency too Saturday and Brown, with all due credit to the rest of the squad, was inclined to ascribe this to the return of Jack Graf after a two-game absence.

The Buckeye mentor described the big senior's play, particularly his "ball handling on those tricky Buckeye reverses as "solid" and it was just that. Also worthy of note was the way the Bucks functioned as downfield blockers. On the long touchdown runs of both Graf, who galloped 64 yards through the line and Fisher, who raced 70 yards after intercepting a pass, the Bucks moved quickly into action to mow down would be tacklers. Graf's power and Fisher's speed and ability to cut back and set up the situations for his blockers did the rest.

The Ohio attack moved with blinding speed and reached its objectives quickly. Finally, the line was charging fast and opening sizeable holes through which Graf, Fisher, Kinkade, Hallabrin and other backs went bounding like so many jack rabbits.

Submerged in the scoring detail Saturday was a "five-down" incident which might have had widspread repercussions had the game been closer. It came on the Badgers second touchdown on the last play of the second period. Every writer in the press box showed five downs on his play by play account but neither the coaches nor officials could find a plausible explanation.

Just before the "fifth down" Wisconsin called time out and accepted a five-yard penalty in order to preserve the last play and on this one, they scored, Seelinger's pass to Farris doing the business. While they didn't make an issue of it, Ohio's boys claimed likewise that Farris still hadn't seen the end zone on the play. He was hit hard on the one-yard line as he caught the ball and definitely made no advance after catching it.

13 Ohio Grid End Season

Ohio Conference Packs Moleskins After Saturday.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Thirteen of Ohio's college grid teams wind up their campaign Saturday, and the Ohio conference rings down its curtain (except for the Thanksgiving Day Denison-Wittenberg epilog), as the Buckeye squads offer a 14-game program.

Heidelberg, Ohio Northern, Wooster, Kenyon, DeSales, Otterbein, Baldwin-Wallace, Findlay, Kent State, Muskingum, Mount Union, Ashland and Oberlin will put their moleskins in the locker after Saturday's contests, joining Youngstown, Defiance, Capital, Bluffton, Marietta and Hiram—all of which retired from action last week-end.

* * *

Seven of the 14 games this week are in the Ohio conference, the loop finishing in a blaze of action and with enough fuel for a winter-long argument about the mythical champion.

Case has completed its loop chores with four wins, Ohio Northern has four conquests and a tie, and Bowling Green has three wins and a deadlock. The Polar Bears and Bee-Gees have a chance to improve their marks Saturday to make it a three-way argument for the crown. The conference does not recognize champions.

Ohio State university's homecoming game—with Illinois as the guest — headlines the program, with second billing going to the Ohio Wesleyan-Case contest at Delaware.

Here's the slate:

Illinois at Ohio State (Big Ten); Ohio Northern at Heidelberg, Wittenberg at Wooster, Muskingum at Mount Union, Findlay at Bowling Green, Denison at Oberlin, Ashland at Otterbein, and Baldwin-Wallace at Toledo (all Ohio conference games); Case at Ohio Wesleyan, Kent State at Akron, North Dakota at Dayton, Kenyon at Allegheny, De Sales at Central (Mich.) State Teachers, and Wilberforce at Tennessee A. & I.

* * *

Following Saturday's program, only 15 games will remain on the Ohio schedule, Xavier staging the final game Nov. 29 against Georgetown at Washington, D. C.

* * *

Last week-end the Buck squads won six and lost four games with out-of-state opponents, giving the Ohioans 49 victories, 36 defeats and two ties against such opposition for the campaign.

Bears Play Redskins

Pro Teams Play Grudge Battle Next Sunday.

CHICAGO—(AP)—If the Washington Redskins still hold a grudge against the Chicago Bears for last year's 73 to 0 whacking in the national football league's title game, they have a chance to get even when the teams clash next Sunday.

The game comes at a time when both the Bears and Redskins have just been nudged out of the leadership in their respective divisions. The Chicagoans slid off the western section top spot a week ago. Washington took the eastern division lead last week but toppled from the throne yesterday.

* * *

The Washington Bears clash has a possible bearing on the championship in each division.

* * *

Washington's short stay in first place was ended yesterday by the Brooklyn Dodgers, who won 13 to 7 and thereby retained their own chances of a share of eastern laurels. The Redskins were replaced by the New York Giants, who won yesterday's scrap with the Detroit Lions, 20 to 13.

* * *

The Chicago Bears, still cautious after their 16 to 14 beating by Green Bay last week, took one period to get acquainted with the fact their opposition was only the last-place Cleveland Rams and then paraded to victory with four touchdowns and two field goals.

* * *

They also compiled 24 first downs for a new league mark, beating Green Bay's old mark of 22, also set this year.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (The Special News Service)—Our guess is that Duke is the team in line for the Rose Bowl bid now, even if Wallace Wade's last trip to the coast wasn't a howling success . . . Last Saturday's game provided all the excuses the boys on the coast needed for not inviting teams or Fordham . . . If Buff Donelli really wants to straighten out the conflict between his two football teams, why doesn't he take the Duquesne players along to the Steelers? . . . They'd probably do as well as the current pros and then Duquesne could make a lot of rumors look good by giving up football . . . Broadcasting the Chicago fight Friday night, Sam Taub announced: "Pastor is concentrating not only on the face but also on the body." . . . What else do you want him to do, Sam? Pull his hair? . . . It's Grandpappy Babe Ruth now. And doesn't that make you feel old?

Cincinnati's sidewalk alumni are asking why their favorite colleges, Xavier and Cincinnati U., don't get together for the benefit of USO or other charity . . . If you wonder why West Vidginia fans think Jackie Hunt of Marshall college is such a great guy, one of 'em informs us that when Jack was given a trophy for being the team's most valuable player, he quietly slipped it to Jim Pearcy, the blocking back, because he insisted the blockers deserved the credit.

Alva Bradley has even considered making young Lou Boudreau manager of the Indians but decided the strain of that job would be too hard on his playing . . . Wonder if he's been considering Charlie Grimm, too. Prexy Bill Veeck of the Milwaukee club says Cholly turned down an offer from a major league club, and who else is looking for a manager?

Pygmies Rise to Smite Giants In Grid Upsets

Pitt's Win Over Fordham Listed As Most Surprising Reversal

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK—(INS)—The giants have become pygmies and the meek possess the football world; that's the story today as amazed gridiron geniuses look back over the most shocking week-end of the season—a gloomy Saturday and Sunday that sent prospective "bowl" bids spinning and left only four major unbeaten and untied teams throughout the land. The upset of mighty Fordham by a Pitt team that hadn't won a game all year and the fury of little Baylor which tied the mighty Longhorns of Texas U. were the biggest surprises while the elimination of Army and Navy from the ranks of the unbeaten left only Duke, Minnesota, Texas A. & M. and Duquesne with perfect records.

It is hard to decide whether Pitt's glorious rise from the dust to conquest of the 6-1 favored Rams or Baylor's "moral" win over the Longhorns was the most surprising. Pitt, well walloped by Purdue, Michigan, Minnesota, Duke and Ohio State, turned loose their ace, Special Delivery Jones, on a Ram team that obviously took the Panthers too lightly, outplayed Fordham from whistle to whistle and registered a well-deserved, 13 to 0 win. Fordham always has one bad day each fall but it is hard to understand how they could take Pitt, one of its most traditional rivals, so lightly.

* * *

Baylor, shellacked by Texas A. & M. 48-0 and by Texas Christian 23-12, didn't figure to walk on the same ball field as Texas, which had averaged 30 points per game. Yet this fighting team played its heart out, held the Texans to a single touchdown in a mighty even ball game and climaxed an 80-yard march, with only 18 seconds left, to tie the contest.

* * *

Fordham, which has been considered the No. 1 candidate for the Sugar bowl bid, probably lost it because of Pitt's previously shoddy record. Texas, of course, still is in the running for its own conference title and a bowl bid but will have to get past the Texas Aggies on Thanksgiving day to be assured of either.

The east was the hardest hit section in the country with Notre Dame and Angelo Bertelli's passes wiping Navy off the unbeaten list, 20-13, in a thriller at Baltimore while an inspired and ever-improving Harvard club took care of Army, 20-6, before 53,000 happy fans at Cambridge.

Duke had little trouble with weak Davidson while William and Mary, which shares the Southern conference lead with the Dukes, beat V. M. I. to stay right with them.

* * *

Minnesota had an off day and some unexpected opposition from Nebraska but managed to keep rolling with a 9-0 win while Mississippi State and ole Mississippi continued to set the pace in the race for Southeastern conference honors with wins over Auburn and Louisiana State, respectively.

* * *

The league-leading Texas Aggies continued to improve and marked up their fourth conference win by belting over the Mustangs of Southern Methodist, 21-10. Duquesne, after a trip to San Francisco, managed to make it seven wins in a row by beating out St. Mary's, 9-0. The Gaels, incidentally, will make a cross country junket later in the month, to meet Fordham here.

* * *

The Big Six leaders, Missouri and Oklahoma, had little more than workouts, the former visiting this city to trample poor, battered NYU's Violets a little deeper into the turf while the Sooners slammed Iowa State, 55-0.

* * *

On the coast Stanford continued to make the citizens "T" conscious and just about started accepting orders for Rose bowl tickets by blanking Southern California, 13-0. The Indians thus won their fourth conference game and have only Washington State and California left to beat.

City Newsmen Get Beaten

Minerva Club Beats Mansfield Pros, 19-0.

Minerva Merchants semi-pro gridders, claiming the state semi-pro championship, displayed their wares to good effect yesterday on their turf to trounce the Mansfield City News team, 19-0.

First tally came in the first period as a result of a 48-yard sustained drive. Bucher crossed the goal on a reverse around left end which was good for 12 yards and six points. Faking a kick, Bucher passed to Gawlik for theconversion.

* * *

Taking the ball on the Mansfield 48 in the second quarter, the Minerva team worked it to the Mansfield 25 and then passed to Gawlik for the second score. A kick for extra point failed.

* * *

Last score came in the third period when Minerva romped 30 yards on a sweep to the Mansfield four-yard line and then opened a hole through which Bucher scored.

On their part the Mansfield club gained 238 yards from scrimmage but was unable to score.

Touchdown Tactics

By BILL KERN
West Virginia U. Coach.

THE SITUATION: You are leading 10-0, midway in the third quarter, it's your ball on the opponents' six-yard stripe. Three running plays, a buck into the strong side, an end sweep, and a short side play gain only a yard. It's fourth and five to go for a touchdown. Both teams are equally matched and your scores came on a pair of nice breaks. So, given the following choices

BILL KERN

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

1. Hit the strong side?
2. Hit the weak side?
3. Run the end?
4. Pass?
5. Kick a field goal?

By BERNIE BIERMAN
Minnesota Football Coach.

THE SITUATION: Your team is kicking off to an opponent notoriously dangerous for long runbacks of kickoffs. Their safety man is on his own 5-yard line with the rest of the team deployed in the usual formation for receiving. If you were directing the kicker in such a situation,

ANSWER

If you have a long distance kickoff artist the obvious maneuver is to kick it over the safety man's head into the end zone, because this will give your entire team a chance to go down. If your kicker is average or mediocre either No. 2 or 3 are obvious choices.

NEW LONDON — Good deeds in times of illness are not confined to farmers.

Recently, 15 fellow C. E. Ward company employes of Joe Amato took their potato forks, hoes, and other necessary implements, and harvested Joe's winter potato crop before the bad weather set in. Amato is still incapacitated as the result of an automobile accident near Elyria, several weeks ago.

THEATERS

Hope Hilarity.

As a veracious young man who believed that if Washington could tell the truth so could he, at least for 24 hours, Bob Hope in "Nothing But the Truth," showing at the Ohio, sets out to win a $10,000 bet from three of his cronies, Edward Arnold, Glenn Anders and Leif Erickson will collect the bet if Hope loses. In his little game of truth Hope is forced to insult every guest on a house boat, compelled to don a woman's dressing gown to escape his tormenters, and finally is dunked in a school of live bait. Paulette Goddard furnishes the optical allure in the picture.

* * *

Sparkling Comedy.

Sparkling chronicle of a battle between two women for the attentions of a somewhat bewildered man, "Our Wife" with Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey and Ellen Drew, continues at the Madison.

Miss Hussey plays the not-unattractive young woman who pits her brains against the other's kitten-like charms and thereby inspires her rival to drastic measures. Melvyn Douglas has the role of a band leader who finds success as complicated as obscurity. Charles Coburn and John Hubbard are in the cast. Outdoor epic depicting the early cattle wars, "Texas," the second feature, presents William Holden and Claire Trevor.

* * *

Hardy Story.

Mickey Rooney in "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," showing at the Ritz deals with the popular screen hero's life in New York, where he tries his luck before deciding between college and business. Judy Garland and Lewis Stone are featured. Gene Autry's "Down Mexico Way" is the co-attraction.

* * *

Navy Musical.

The adventures of three pals in the navy make "Sailors On Leave" the attraction at the Park, a hilarious vehicle for William Ludigan, Cliff Nazarro and Chick Chandler. Proceeding on the theory that he will inherit $25,000 if he marries before his 27th birthday, Lundigan gets in all sorts of jams as the result of a frame-up by his companions. Shirley Ross provides the romantic interest, there are some new tunes introduced, and the cast includes Mae Clark and Ruth Donnelly. Frank Buck's "Jungle Cavalcade," is the second picture.

* * *

Scrambled Romance.

Merle Oberon and Melvyn Douglas are teamed in "That Uncertain Feeling," a gay comedy showing at the Majestic, with Burgess Meredith, Alan Mowbray and Eve Arden in the supporting cast. As a young married couple who discover through a psychoanalyst that, according to Freud, they have no right to be happy, Douglas and Miss Oberon look to Burgess Meredith, a wild-eyed musician, to solve their problems. "Devil Dogs of the Air," starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien is the co-attraction.

STOCK LEADERS DISPLAY SIGNS OF SOFTENING

Furnace Repair and Shortage of Scrap Keeps Steel Output Down.

NEW YORK — Scattered firm spots appeared in today's stock market but some leaders continued to exhibit softening tendencies.

Issues given occasional support included Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Consolidated Edison and Montgomery Ward.

Tilting a shade downward at time were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth and General Electric.

Market analysts scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that only the necessity for periodical open-health furnace repair and inability to obtain sufficient scrap stand in the way of steel output above 100 per cent of rated capacty.

Steelmaking furnaces recently shut down because of the lack of scrap, it was added, remain idle and others are expected to go out shortly.
